'What's Going On Here?'

Nightmare Fleet Spreads Terror

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Island Editor

With a shudder, the crew of a Russian tug raced away from a holed Canadian fishing boat, leaving three Canadians abandoned on the sinking craft.

One man died, two suffered shock and exposure, and their craft the Aleutian Queen sank Wednesday, but according to the survivors the Russians wouldn't lift a finger to help. They even sailed away with the Aleutian Queen's stabilizer, said the survivors.

The collision occurred at 7:40 Wednesday morning, when the Russian tug, pulling a trawl, smashed into the back of the Aleutian Queen.

The action occurred in pre-dawn light, 21 miles west of Mexican Point on Hope Island.

off the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

This would place the accident outside the presently-accepted 12-mile limit, around Vancouver Island.

But fishermen and chamber's of commerce on the Island are pushing for a baseline to be established from Triangle Island north to the Queen Charlottes, and the accident occurred well within this limit.

The Russian vessel smashed into the back of the Aleutian Queen.

The three men on the Canadian vessel ran to the back, and saw their craft was taking water. They also noticed the boat's stabilizer, about 30 feet long and made from pipe, had fallen onto the Russian vessel.

The men aboard were Oisten Hansen, 53, and his son Robert, 21, both of Vancouver, and cook Oud Gronlund of North Surrey.

They tried to get the attention of the Russians, to get help, but the Russians had all rushed to the wheelhouse.

Smith Letter to Queen

Rhodesia Act Is Imminent

LONDON (UPI)—Rhodesia may declare Unilateral Independence from Britain within 24 hours, unofficial government sources predict.

They said an unexpected exchange of messages between Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith and Queen Elizabeth, coupled with troop movements in Rhodesia and the deadlocked independence talks, seemed to indicate a declaration of independence was imminent.

If the white-ruled African colony does seize its freedom from Britain, it will be the first to do so since the American colonies did it in 1776.

In his message to the Queen, Smith said Britain and Rhodesia found it "impossible to agree on the course of government which may be best for all the peoples of Rhodesia."

Troops On Move

Sources said this underlined Prime Minister Harold Wilson's frequently-stated warning that only the British Parliament can legally grant Rhodesia its independence.

In Rhodesia a government spokesman confirmed that troop movements were under way in the country. He denied, however, that the exercises were anything other than "purely routine."

State of emergency regulations currently in force precluded his elaborating, the spokesman said.

Earlier Wednesday Rhodesian Chief Justice Sir Hugh Beadle, who came here contrary to Smith's wishes in response to an invitation from Prime Minister Harold Wilson, left by plane for home. He declined comment.

Beadle spent 24 hours in Britain in the hope of establishing a new line of communication between the two governments.

Whitehall sources said Wilson sent an oral message to Smith early Wednesday through British High Commissioner Jack Johnston.

"It will be to our lasting sorrow should we find ourselves excluded from the Commonwealth, but nothing can break the ties of common heritage and kinship which we share with so many of its older members," the letter said.

It pledged loyalty and devotion to the Crown "whatever happens."

The letter was signed by Smith and 15 other ministers.

The Queen's reply said she hoped the Rhodesians would demonstrate their loyalty "by continuing to act in a constitutional manner."

There was no official indication of the contents of the message, but it was understood Wilson sought Smith's go-ahead for the proposed royal commission to be set up to start polling black and white Rhodesian opinion on Rhodesia's terms for independence.

In Salisbury Johnston confirmed he had delivered "a confidential message" to Smith during a 50-minute meeting with the premier.

Yes-It Could Happen Again

Blackout Still Dark Mystery

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Government investigators moved swiftly to determine whether "someone pulled the wrong switch" or a mechanical mishap caused the massive power breakdown that plunged millions of northeasterners into a nightmare of darkness.

Chairman Joseph Swidler of the Federal Power Commission, under orders from President Johnson to come up with some answers, launched the investigation. Congressional probes also were planned.

"When you look at the possibilities, one of them was that a piece of equipment broke down. Another possibility is that it wasn't operated right, conceivably, someone pulled the wrong switch," Swidler said. (See also Pages 23, 29.)

START PINPOINTING

The federal investigation would start with pinpointing the cause of the blackout and end with recommendations that would prevent a similar disaster.

Residents of an 80,000 square mile area experienced the extraordinary night without electricity, beginning shortly after 5 p.m. EST Tuesday. Hit by the power failure were parts of New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Vermont, Pennsylvania long with parts of Ontario.

Aiding Swidler in the search are the FBI, the defence department, the justice department and other agencies.

However, Swidler said "We may never trace where it started." But he hoped to have a preliminary report offering at least some clues ready for the president by the end of the week.

WATER OVER DAM

"Whatever happened is water over the dam," he told newsmen after the meeting. "It is useful only as it guides us for the future. What this demonstrates is the need for ever greater care, for, say, greater reliability and sophistication of equipment for enlargement of reserves not only in generating equipment but also for design of equipment for overload and emergency equipment."

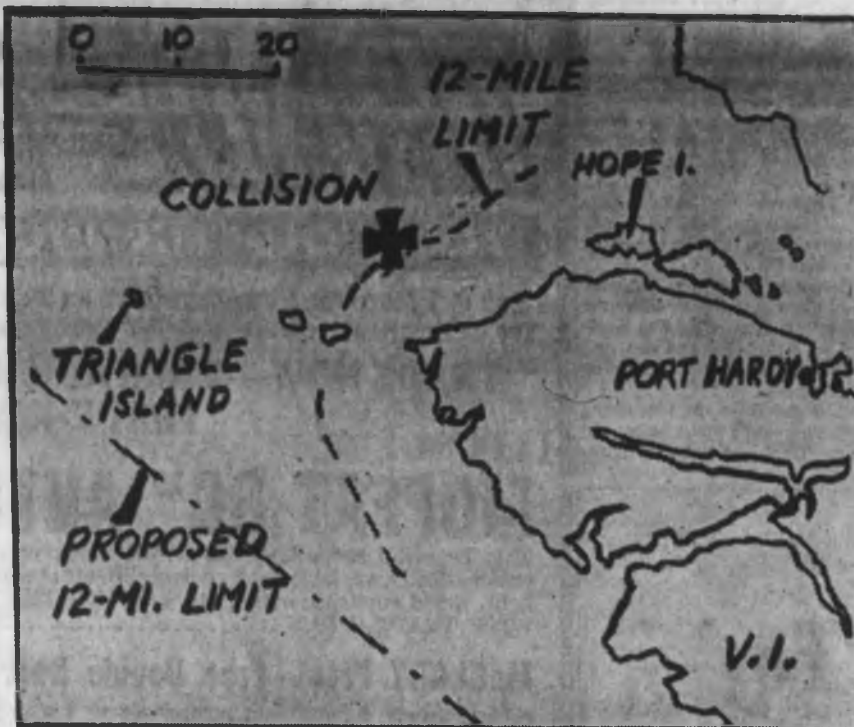

So far, he said there was no evidence that the failure was the result of a deliberate act. "There always was the possibility of a similar blackout in the future," he said.

"I don't think there is any guarantee this could not happen again. But there is a very high order of probability that it will not."

"But this is not to say that this risk should be further tolerated or shouldn't be reduced," he added.

NAVY, REDS RENDEZVOUS

VANCOUVER (CP)—The flagship of a Soviet fishing fleet headed Wednesday night toward the spot where a Canadian trawler sank with the loss of one man after colliding with a Russian vessel.

The fisheries department patrol vessel Laurier was already at the scene, off the northern tip of Vancouver Island, but a department spokesman in Vancouver said the Laurier was unable to communicate with the Russians because of language problems.

The Royal Canadian Navy had ordered the ocean escort HMCS

BULLETIN

A rendezvous between the ocean escort Stettler and the Russian fishing fleet flagship took place early today 50 miles northwest of Cape Scott. The two ships are now heading for a rendezvous with a Russian tug which is towing the fishing vessel involved in Tuesday morning's crash.

The meeting should take place after dawn.

A navy spokesman said the officials would discuss circumstances under which the accident took place to determine who was in the wrong.

"There is no hostility here," he stressed.

Stettler to locate the Soviet fleet commander and ask him to go to the area.

The Vancouver-based trawler Aleutian Queen sank earlier Wednesday in Queen Charlotte Sound north of Vancouver Island, three hours after the collision.

RCAF search and rescue headquarters in Vancouver said Cook Oud Gronlund of North Surrey was drowned. Oisten Hansen, owner-skipper of the 64-foot Aleutian Queen, and his son Robert were picked up by the American trawler Western Maid.

There was doubt as to whether the collision occurred within the 12-mile fishing limit set by Canada.

This Must Stop!

Fishermen Boiling With Rage

This must stop. Now!

Rage and indignation are boiling through the ranks of B.C. coast fishermen, following the ramming of a Canadian vessel by a Russian tug, resulting in the death of one man, Wednesday.

And the manoeuvres of the Russian ships, endangering the lives of Canadian and American fishermen, have also incensed the fishing industry.

BUT HOW?

GENERAL FEELING

This was the general feeling among fishermen interviewed at Fishermen's Wharf in Victoria Tuesday.

"It seems like an awful thing to happen but I think this will bring some action," said veteran dragger fisherman Herb Smith of Victoria, skipper of the Elwin S.

'GUTS NEEDED'

"Maybe now they'll have the guts to do something. If a little country like Peru can set a 200 mile limit and patrol it with gunboats I don't see why we can't do something," he said. "If you cross Peru's fishing boundary you get shot at."

'MOVE THEM OUT'

Mr. Smith will be heading for northern waters in the spring. "But I don't suppose it will do any good. I don't imagine there'll be any fish left."

Sorny Ross, chairman of Campbell River Chamber of Commerce fishing committee and a trawler skipper, said the Russian fleet should be moved out of the area immediately.

'HISTORIC RIGHT'

"If we don't get them out fast, they will establish a historic right, and we will never get them out," he said.

In Nanaimo, Bill MacDonald of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, said "we have been calling for an international fishing line, but we've had no success with the last two governments."

He said the sinking of a Ca-

Plans Talks with Johnson

Erhard Demands Nuclear Arsenal

BONN (UPI) — Chancellor Ludwig Erhard Wednesday demanded nuclear might for West Germany.

Erhard said he would go to the United States Dec. 6 to press his case personally with President Johnson.

Erhard's demand for an end to what he termed the western alliance's "unjust" nuclear discrimination against West Germany seemed certain to provoke fresh protests from the Soviet Union.

The Russians have warned the west of counter-measures if "militaristic" Germany gets its finger on the nuclear trigger. Moscow also maintains the issue of inclusion of Germany in a western nuclear force is blocking a treaty banning the spread of nuclear weapons.

Erhard's demand for nuclear partnership came in his first major policy address to parliament since his victory at the polls in September.

"We must solve the problems which derive from the fact that now some members of the alliance have nuclear weapons, while others have not," he said. "Alliance members must participate in nuclear defense according to the degree of the threat to them and the degree of their defensive burden."

He said weight has shifted within NATO since it was formed more than 15 years ago—a delicate reminder that West Germany now supplies more conventional forces to the alliance than any other member except the United States.

Erhard said there have been suggestions that Germany be denied a nuclear role because it is a divided nation.

France States Its Stand On UN Seat For China

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — France spoke out for the first time in the United Nations Wednesday on behalf of seating Communist China and declared the long-standing dispute should be settled by simple majority vote.

Echoing the reasoning of President de Gaulle in establishing diplomatic ties with Peking last year, French Ambassador Roger Seydoux argued for Communist China's admission as a matter of justice, political realism and historical inevitability.

NEEDED FOR SOLUTION

Without Peking's participation, Seydoux said the 117-country General Assembly on the third day of the China debate, there could be no solution to the vital issues of peace in South Asia and nuclear disarmament.

"Why delay the outcome of something that is a foregone conclusion by rehearsing an old debate?" he asked.

In the past, France voted against Peking's admission.

With a reversal foreshadowed by French recognition of Peking, only Seydoux's request for a simple majority vote in the assembly contained any element of surprise. In 1961 the assembly decided the question was sufficiently important to require two-thirds approval, but it has not been decided yet whether the same rule should apply this year.

A U.S. spokesman described Seydoux' reasoning as curious, saying the importance he attached to seating Peking seemed an admission that it was "a very important question and not one to be decided by a simple majority."

Ambassador Salvador P. Lopez of the Philippines asked for a specific ruling from the president of the assembly, Amintore Fanfani of Italy, holding the China issue is of "undeniable importance" and requires a two-thirds majority.

Lopez recalled that France had argued before the assembly in 1961 that the question was important and he added that merely because the Peking regime exists it does not follow that "it is our duty to embrace it and welcome it here."

Diplomatic observers predict Mao Tse-tung's regime again will be barred from the UN, especially if the two-thirds rule is applied. It takes only a simple majority to demand a two-thirds vote.

Red Rockets Better Russian Chiefs Say

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet government claimed Wednesday it is ahead of the United States in rocketry.

At the same time it justified its manufacture of orbital missiles by charges that the proposed manned orbital laboratory and other U.S. space projects are used "for aggressive military ends."

The government newspaper Izvestia stressed that the Soviet Union so far has only made orbital missiles—not actually orbited them.

Remembrance Day

THESE hearts were woven of human joys and cares,
Washed marvelously with sorrow, swift to mirth.
The years had given them kindness, Dawn was theirs,
And sunset, and colors of the earth,
These had seen movement, and heard music;
known Slumber and waking; loved; gone proudly friended;
Felt the quick stir of wonder; sat alone;
Touched flowers and furs and cheeks.
All this is ended.

There are waters blown by changing winds to laughter
And lit by the rich skies, all day. And after, Frost with a gesture, stays the waves that dance
And wandering loveliness. He leaves a white
Unbroken glory, a gathering radiance,

—Rupert Brooke.

Abiding Monument

THIS morning, for an enshrined two minutes, man's stillest silence will encompass the Cenotaph in Parliament Square. Victorians will bare their heads in annual public tribute to their war dead.

They have been doing this now for many years.
Elsewhere in the world on this sacred day other multitudes will make like obeisance. The remembrance has become universal.

The Greeks gave us the cenotaph, both the name and the custom. Literally it means an empty tomb, symbolic as the resting place of those whose bodies could not be recovered.

But of course the modern cenotaph, our cenotaph, is not empty. To many mourners drawn to it each Remembrance Day it is the visible burial place of their loved ones, as real as would be the headstone on the actual grave. It is an abiding monument to brave and cherished men and women.

"At the going down of the sun and in the morning we will remember them."

Late in Asking

IF HIGH-RISE apartment blocks are to be built along the southern edge of Victoria's legislative precinct as it now exists, this will have two effects. It will tend to wall in, visually, the complex of provincial buildings and detract from the architectural distinction of some of them. It will also make the future purchase of property south of the precinct, for extension, too expensive to be considered.

Thus there will be general sympathy with the request of the public works department that the city enlarge the zoned precinct, moving the border a block farther south.

That the department did not make up its mind sooner that the added territory would be needed for eventual expansion is indeed not to its credit. Though it understood originally that the city would keep high-rise development at a distance from this part of the precinct, the appearance is that it has not been keeping up to date on town planning. Its pressure for the extension should have come while the Capital Region Planning Board was preparing a report on recommended land-use in the city—not now that this plan is complete.

There is, of course, one direct solution: for the government to buy now the land it is going to want in the future. But Public Works Minister Chant apparently is not even interested in acquiring the property where one high-rise is about to be built.

Yet it is in both the provincial interest and Victoria's to see that the future beauty and amenity of the centre of government remains unimpaired. Under the circumstances citizens will undoubtedly welcome the mayor's statement that the department's request will be given every consideration, though this may mean revising a plan on which the ink is hardly dry.

Opinion Polls

ONE doubts that the House of Commons will do as Attorney-General Bonner suggests and instigate an investigation into political polls and pollsters. It will have more important things to do as the new Parliament meets to cope with its second stalemate composition in succession.

And especially since that stalemate confounded all the pundits who guessed wrong in advance of Monday last.

Mr. Bonner says these straw polls cast an unnatural light on electioneering. That they may do although the light, as we have seen, can be badly dimmed. And it is a fact that opinion polls are seized on by partisan groups to try to persuade voters to jump on what is alleged to be the winning bandwagon.
The saving grace is that this doesn't always work.

Right now for instance the pollsters of this week's federal election are hiding their heads in discomfort or making lame excuses as to how they went wrong.

One is inclined to think also that in a provincial election Mr. Bonner wouldn't be tempted to assuage such polls if for example they seemed to show his own Socred party to be leading in popular favor.

In any case in a free democracy where argument and polemic are part of the process of electioneering there can be no thought of banning such expression of survey opinion if it is used to cast misleading weight on one side or the other. If there were then no candidate could himself predict a victory for himself or his party even if privately of opposite view.

Political polls are like minority governments, something we have to live with. But when they are as inaccurate as Monday's election proved them to be this shows the electorate follows its own bent and not that of the pollsters.

The End of a Nine-Week Sleep

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

THE LONG, NINE-WEEK sleep is over. The national capital, especially Parliament Hill and the enclaves of federal departmental administration at Lion buildings scattered about the city and its suburbs, ran up the blinds and pulled back the curtains.

With a sudden lurch, the vast and complicated administrative machinery of government, kinking quietly these past campaigning weeks, roared back into high gear.

The quiet that an election always brings to the capital was shattered. The place was in business—the nation's biggest business—once more at the same old plus $8 billion tax stand.

These last nine weeks have been a time of waiting for the decision at the polls.

Where London and Washington bounce and boil with political activity in the weeks between the calling of an election and the polling of the ballots, Ottawa snoozes.

This is not where the action is—this is out on the campaign trails with the prime minister, the opposition leader and chiefs of the assorted splinter bands.

About the only loud noise in the capital has been the thumping of those mimeograph machines that John Diefenbaker for a time was accusing Lester Pearson of hiding behind. When just about all else was still, the duplicator mills were spinning out that endless stream of party leaders' statements, itineraries, speech texts in the silent war of the press releases.

This has been the "second front" in the recurring political war of the Grits and the Tories, the battle of the mimeograph machines behind and on the flank of the front line where the two leaders, Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker and their lieutenants have fought and bled and finally won and lost out there on the primary field of action where the taxpayers could see and hear, make up their minds and dictate the outcome.

The machinery of government did keep turning over in this "silent time" in the capital, kept turning very quietly and slowly, but only on the junior levels where pension and family allowance cheques are prepared and run-of-the-routine mail correspondence kept moving.

But at the senior levels of the federal paper factory, where policy and decisions are made, all was still.

The departmental deputy ministers, the men who really run this machinery that runs the government, sat tight, waiting for the election storm to blow itself out and the political dust to settle.

The idea is to keep the machinery ticking quietly over, like an idling motor, revved just enough to keep it from stalling.

With the members of the cabinet—and in these past three weeks, especially the prime minister—these men of ultimate decision off The Hill and out of the capital on the campaign trail, "everything put-off-able," as one deputy minister deftly phrased it, "all that is postponable," is stored on administrative ice.

At widely-spaced intervals, with luck once weekly, the cabinet, or a fraction of it meet briefly in the East Block.

But these meetings have more of an "insiders' opinion poll," more of an informal campaign survey than a cabinet session. The big decisions have been where the PM should go next and what should be the line rather than what to do about the ever-present and accumulating national administrative problems.

For who knew, for dead certain sure, up until the eleventh hour—and then it was only instinctive seat-of-the-pants political guessimating—what was going to happen? So how could any really basic, long-range decisions be made?

While the $8 billion plant idled quietly, the people who man the main switches, the 50,000 civil servants here in Ottawa's federal administrative headquarters had a problem, peculiarly their own.

What to do with dragging time?

Inconspicuously—and who, actually, was around to do any serious looking and checking—the junior staff, the clerks and stenographers and secretaries were stretching out their coffee breaks in the West and Centre Block cafeterias and in the score or more of canteens in the dozens of federal buildings scattered for 20 miles around.

The more senior types took care, in some measure, of lagging time, with a longer lunch period, the late start or early finish to the working day.

But even so, with the tourist season done and the half million flood of visitors at ebb-time, the capital has seldom seen a time like it—with nobody here but the full-time residents.

Now the time of waiting is done. "Postponables" are no longer "put-off-able" but made ready for action.

The capital is back in business—alive and politically living again.

A Probing Mission to Moscow

By ROBERT STEPHENS from London

THE VISIT OF THE British foreign secretary, Mr. Michael Stewart, to Moscow at the end of this month will come at a crucial time in East-West diplomacy and in the affairs of the Western Alliance. Of the three main subjects which Mr. Stewart is expected to discuss with the Soviet leaders—Viet Nam, a nuclear non-proliferation treaty and European security problems—the first two are now at the centre of Western preoccupations, and the third is closely linked with another question at the heart of East-West relations—the German problem.

It is unlikely that the Anglo-Soviet talks will produce spectacular direct results on any of these questions, but they may form an important element in a gradually developing diplomatic effort.

The difficulty is that in each case either Britain or Russia is restricted in its capacity to take decisions or initiatives by its relations with its allies or by its own limited degree of involvement. The British are pinning some slight hopes on what they see as signs that Russia has now decided to take a more active role vis-a-vis China, after showing much restraint towards Peking since the fall of Mr. Khrushchev.

In view of China's recent discomfitures in Indonesia, in the abortive Afro-Asian conference, and in the Indo-Pakistani quarrel, Mr. Khrushchev's successors may now be prepared not only to reassert Soviet leadership among the world Communist parties, but also to resume a more active diplomacy in South-east Asia, if necessary in competition with Peking.

Such a change may show itself in discussions in Moscow of a possible settlement of the Viet Nam war. Neither Britain nor Russia is deeply committed militarily in Viet Nam, though Britain has sent a few specialist security advisers to South Viet Nam and Russia has supplied arms, including anti-aircraft missiles, to Hanoi. But both Britain and Russia have a direct responsibility for Vietnamese affairs as co-chairmen of the 1954 conference which brought the original Indo-China war to an end.

Britain has made repeated appeals to Russia over the past year to join in calling an international conference or any other form of talks to negotiate a settlement in Viet Nam.

But although Russia has said she thinks a settlement should be on the basis of the principles of the 1954 agreement—a declaration she repeated only recently in the talks in Moscow between the French foreign minister, M. Couve de Murville, and the Soviet government—she has so far held back from accepting the responsibilities of co-chairmanship and has declined to join in a call for talks.

The Russians have said that they cannot urge negotiations so long as U.S. "aggression" against Viet Nam continues. They have never made it clear whether this means only that the Americans must stop bombing North Viet Nam before there can be a move for negotiations, or whether a withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Viet Nam is the pre-condition for talks.

This vacillancy is probably due chiefly to the uncertain attitude of North Viet Nam which has given different conditions for negotiations at different times. So long as Russia was reluctant to clash openly with China, or to become too deeply involved in Southeast Asia, she was in no hurry to press Hanoi to clarify its policy or to adopt a more conciliatory attitude.

But it may be that Russia is now more prepared to make her weight felt in Hanoi, for two reasons. First, she may be readier than before to challenge Chinese advice to the North Vietnamese to fight on at all costs. Secondly, she may consider that a continuation of the Viet Nam war will do increasing harm to the prospects of a Soviet-U.S. detente. The next step in such a detente could well be a non-proliferation treaty to stop the spread of nationally-owned nuclear weapons.

Russia has a common interest with the United States in this subject, and a special interest of her own in seeing that West Germany does not acquire nuclear weapons, directly or indirectly.

At the moment the U.S. is undecided whether or not to give a non-proliferation treaty priority over the inclusion of West Germany in a NATO nuclear force, such as the MLF. The effect of Soviet attitudes on Viet Nam on the prospects of a detente might well be decisive in making up President Johnson's mind.

So while the British foreign secretary's visit to Moscow will not decide any of these great questions, it may give some valuable indications of the way the Kremlin's mind is now working.

Today in History

By The Canadian Press

United States Air Force Captain Orvil Anderson and Albert Stevens rode a balloon to a record-breaking altitude of 72,377 feet—more than 13 miles—30 years ago today—in 1935.

The balloon, launched from Rapid City, S.D., carried a heavy load of scientific equipment which recorded cosmic-ray data and took photographs. The flight, sponsored by the U.S. Army and the National Geographic Society, broke the previous record of 61,221 feet set two years earlier by two other American officers.

The 1935 record remained unbroken for more than 20 years. 1918—Independence of Poland was proclaimed.

1920—An unknown soldier was buried in Westminster Abbey and the Cenotaph was unveiled in Whitehall, London.

First World War: Fifty years ago today—in 1915—Winston Churchill resigned as first lord of the admiralty and joined the British army in France; Russian forces occupied Kemmen and Anting west of Riga.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today—in 1940—Fleet Air Arm aircraft attacked Taranto naval base, seriously damaging two Italian battleships, three cruisers and two auxiliary vessels; Gen. de Gaulle's Free French forces captured Libreville, the chief port of Gabon in French Equatorial Africa.

ZAMBIA (formerly Northern Rhodesia) is watching the goings-on in neighboring Rhodesia with growing irritation. It is irritated with Mr. Harold Wilson, British prime minister, Mr. Ian Smith, Rhodesia's premier, and—although this is said less openly—with the African nationalists.

Although Zambians realize that unilateral declaration of independence may have dire consequences for their country they seem reluctant to treat the Rhodesian affair as anything more than a preposterous and time-consuming charade. Perhaps their inability to do anything more than stand and wait accounts for this attitude.

Zambia—she has just celebrated her first anniversary of independence—is absorbed in her own vast development programs and begrudges the attention diverted to the interminable squabble across the Zambezi. All this century Zambia has been yoked to Rhodesia. During the postwar 10 years of the Central African Federation, Northern Rhodesia felt itself financially drained and politically retarded by its southern neighbor. Now it wants to forget the place and look northwards to Tanzania and Kenya.

Symbolically, Lusaka, Zambia's capital, has currently staged the conference of the Economic Commission for Africa. Its final resolution called for a common market linking Zambia with the North. Rhodesian Africans are not popular in Zambia. Officials of the ruling United National Independence Party regularly tell followers of Mr. Joshua Nkomo (the Rhodesian African leader) to "go home and fight their own battles."

It is rather hard because Smith's Rhodesia is a tougher nut to crack than African nationalism has so far experienced. No one doubts the Zambian leaders' sincerity when they talk about "our brethren under the heel of white domination" but sometimes they must wish Rhodesia was as far away as Greenland so that they can apply all their energies to new schools and farm projects at home.

The feeling about Mr. Wilson is that he should stop talking and do something. President Kenneth Kaunda believes that a short, sharp military occupation of Rhodesia could be put through with a minimum of fighting.

Both publicly and in correspondence he has offered Zambia a base for this. The Zambian government has appealed to Britain to recover for her a large consignment of military equipment impounded a month ago by the Rhodesian

Canada and NATO

By MAX FREEDMAN from Ottawa

THE first official in the entire NATO community to give public expression to the philosophy which later produced the NATO treaty was a senior official of the Canadian government. He was Mr. Escott Reid, then an assistant to Mr. L. B. Pearson in the department of external affairs in Ottawa, and now, after a most distinguished career in diplomacy, the head of an important college at York University in Toronto.

This fragment of diplomatic history is worth recalling now since it testified to Canada's continued and unbroken loyalty to NATO as a high priority of Canada's foreign policy. That loyalty extends to all political parties, and to all regions of the country. It was not disturbed or weakened by the recent election campaign. It is a fixed and constant objective of the Canadian people to strengthen NATO and to continue it. Those who wish to change the present power of NATO beyond recognition, to divide and weaken it, should go to another capital city. They will find no support for their views in Ottawa.

In the period which immediately preceded the adoption of the NATO treaty in 1949, there was a widespread fear that Russia's frequent and flagrant use of the veto would paralyze the United Nations as an agency of collective security. Canada shared the judgment of England and the United States that it was wholly consistent with the charter to have a system of regional security free from the restraints and dangers that come from an abuse of the veto power.

Like these other governments, Canada thought it was very important to erect this regional barrier to the expansion of Soviet power in Western Europe. Unlike them, however, Canada has persistently refused to see NATO as a military alliance alone. This emphasis on the military danger meant that NATO's strength would depend on Russia's behaviour, on a threat to Western Europe from the outside, rather than on the cohesive unity of NATO's members acting together to satisfy their own positive purpose in building a genuine political community.

In Canada's eyes, the patron saint of NATO was not Stalin with his evil designs but General Marshall with his policy to give new unity and strength to Western Europe as the indispensable foundation for a new type of regional security.

This explains why Canada has always given such importance to Article Two of the NATO treaty, the non-military article which pledges all members to remove economic and political barriers to their closer co-operation. It is no exaggeration to say that Canada foresaw the confusion of counsel that would emerge in NATO with the passing, at least for a time, of the palpable and cruel threat of aggression embodied in Soviet policy. In the forthcoming discussions on NATO's future, discussions that will last for many months and which will go to the roots of Western policy, no country will have a better record than Canada and few will be able to make a more constructive contribution.

There is a special reason for Canada's concern which should commend itself to the United States. The formation of NATO, in Canada's judgment, gave stability and continuity to U.S. policy in Western Europe that would otherwise have been dangerously lacking. In the absence of this enterprise in mutual security, the United States might have abridged its association with Western Europe at various times since 1949 in disappointment or disgust. That has not happened because the very existence of NATO was a powerful incentive to keep it from happening. Canada starts its analysis of NATO from the opposite pole of President de Gaulle's thesis. De Gaulle wants the United States to mingle as little as possible with Western Europe except when American help is urgently needed in an emergency. Canada wants the United States to be mixed up even more with Europe so that the Atlantic partnership, of which Presidents Kennedy and Johnson have had prophetic glimpses, will become an authentic and abiding reality.

This fact is worth remembering when Canada begins to submit proposals for strengthening NATO's methods of consultation and for achieving some agreement on a grand political design to supplement the military co-operation which until now has been the essence of the alliance. There is no danger, in Canada's judgment, that the diverse views of America, Britain, France and Germany will be denied an ample hearing. The weight of their national strength and material power guarantees them a full hearing.

But Canada with a noble obstinacy refuses to believe that wisdom resides with the great powers alone. It believes rather that countries like Italy and Belgium and Holland and Canada have important and perhaps indispensable ideas to offer. Canada intends to offer them even though they will not all be popular in the United States, and may her example prosper and spread in other countries in the Atlantic community.

New Weapon Tested on Indians

By ANTONY TERRY, from Bonn

Defence experts here claim that a "cut rate" German-designed anti-tank guided missile decisively turned the tables in the crucial Sialkot tank battle in the India-Pakistan war by knocking out more than 300 of the Indian, British, and U.S.-built Second World War tanks.

The partly plastic missile is armed with a hollow charge which cuts through 20 inches of armor plate.

The Bonn government has banned further exports to Pakistan of the missile which costs $765 apiece and which is also in use by a number of NATO armies. The ban follows protests by India.

The designers, West Germany's foremost missile manufacturers, Boelkow GBM.H., of Ottobrunn, near Munich, who are engaged on nearly 100 defence contracts, most of them secret, say Pakistan will continue to produce the weapon under license in a large factory built near Rawalpindi.

A Boelkow spokesman said news of the missile's effectiveness in destroying "a large part" of India's armored forces at Sialkot had resulted in a flood of enquiries from Middle East countries. The Bonn government has also banned export of the missile to Indonesia "while the tension lasts."

Boelkow said they had tried to sell the missile, the "Cobra," which weighs only 22 pounds, both to India and Pakistan, but the Indians were "too slow off the mark" and the Pakistanis licence fees paid by Pakistan to the West German firm for the "Cobra" were $1,500,000, plus "a considerable sum" for technical assistance in building up the production plant at Rawalpindi and other scientific know-how provided by the German firm.

Detailed information of the actual number of missiles launched by the Pakistanis in the Sialkot battle was said by Boelkow to be "still incomplete," but was believed to be more than 300.

The missile has a range of more than a mile, travels at nearly 200 mph and is guided onto the tank by a trailing wire by the operator who watches its flight through binoculars and sends "electronic orders" to the missile in flight.

The head of the Boelkow weapons department said: "We have heard from the Sialkot battle that the Indian tank crews were dumfounded when the missiles landed on them because they had no idea where they were coming from and could not see them in flight."

"Many tank crews abandoned their vehicles in a panic before they were even hit: which we consider is a pretty humane way of making war."

"One of our main arguments to prospective customers is that this weapon is ideal for countries still using Second World War defence equipment and tanks."

"The Sialkot battle was a classic operational tryout of a new weapon system—a chance which seldom occurs."

Enuresis

To

Delinquency

A high proportion of delinquents reveal a history of persistent bed-wetting after the age of five. The delinquent who was a persistent bed-wetter as a child is likely to commit the more serious, aggressive type of crime, up to and including murder.

In 1954, Dr. Portia Holman, a British psychiatrist, noted that the incidence of enuresis among severely maladjusted children was twice as high as that among the general school population.

Dr. J. J. Michaels, an American psychiatrist, in a detailed study of eight adolescent murderers, found that six of them had been persistent bed-wetters.

He stated that the enuretic child is likely to be impulsive, impatient and impelled to act before thinking. "They feel the urgency of the psychological moment, as at an earlier date they could not hold their urine."

These findings have been subjected to further scrutiny by Dr. Marvin Hader of the Clive Centre Clinic, New York, who has published the results of a survey of 147 delinquents in the latest issue of the Archives of General Psychiatry.

His figures confirm previous findings in that 28 per cent of the delinquents interviewed had been persistent bed-wetters in childhood—a percentage three times as high as that among the normal child population.

He confirmed also that criminals with a history of bed-wetting were to be found among those who had committed the more serious type of offence.

Dr. Hader's findings fully support the position taken by most child guidance clinics which view bed-wetting as a sign of a generalized personality disorder needing psychotherapy, and do not aim simply to "cure" enuresis leaving the associated emotional problems unexamined.

Tyranny Holds Mortgage Upon Freedom

By MAJ.-GEN. W. H. S. MACKLIN

Today marks the 47th anniversary of the armistice that closed the Great War. The ranks of its veterans have thinned. Those who are left are now old men.

Macklin

History Delayed

Canada thought so little of the countless deeds those men had done that 44 years elapsed before the official history of the Canadian Expeditionary Force of 1914-1919 was written and published.

It is probably that, for the most part, why that history now moulders, on library shelves. Another, and even more frightful war had intervened, and its predecessor was almost forgotten.

No board of education prescribes that history as a text book; no university teaches its lessons.

Looking back over the long years since the first armistice day brings to mind the dialogue between the old peasant Kasper, and his small daughter Wilhelmine, in Robert Southey's poem on the futility of the Battle of Blenheim, which was the greatest triumph of the great Duke of Marlborough, ancestor of Sir Winston Churchill:

"But what good came of it at last?" cried little Wilhelmine. "Why that I cannot tell," quoth he. "But 'twas a famous victory!"

The nations that had shed their best blood on the road to victory on the battlefields of 1914-1918 soon lost their inspiration and cohesion, and lapsed into confusion and infirmity of purpose.

A tremendous revolution swept the Anglo-Saxon peoples. The real issues of the Great War were forgotten, and it was all blamed on something vaguely called "militarism".

Truths Ignored

But our people ignored these truths, and just 21 years after that first armistice we fell into the even more awful horror of the Second World War.

It lasted six blood-soaked, weary years, and cost Canada the lives of more than 40,000 of our finest men. Millions of innocent men, women and children were tortured, starved, cremated, or shot. Millions more perished by bombs.

In that struggle we smashed the tyrannies of Germany and Japan. But tyranny is always with us. It is like the magic tree in the old fairy story. Whenever a root or limb was lopped off that tree two greater roots or limbs sprang out in its place.

So it happened that no sooner had we won the Second World War than we were faced with the powerful despotism of Communist Russia, bent on world conquest, and animated by the creed of Lenin, openly based on terror, treachery and deceit.

Added to that we now have Red China, an inscrutable, oriental nation, the most popu-

Arms and armaments were seen as evils in themselves, and were condemned as the root of all strife and warfare. Yet even the meanest intellect should be able to comprehend that armaments do not cause anything. They are no more than a symptom of the sinfulness of human society.

For years, from pulpit and rostrum; from classroom and editorial sanctum, the soldier was described as a militarist or warmonger. Clergymen thundered that we must beat our swords into ploughshares and our spears into pruning hooks.

The truth is that as often as not the soldier, far from being a warmonger, is the best peacemaker of them all. In the past two decades the Canadian armed forces have been striving to keep the peace in the face of incredible difficulties in many lands and places—on the turbulent border between India and Pakistan; in Indo-China; on the boundary of Israel and Egypt; in Cyprus, and in the Congo.

At a cost of hundreds of lives they helped to quell Communist aggression in Korea. They have been kicked and cursed by all the belligerents, and have borne all this with a patient shrug.

The business of our navy has been to protect those who pass on the sea upon their lawful occasions, and the job of our air force has been to keep hungry hawks from killing our chickens.

lous in the world, and traditionally careless of human life, which has already committed undisguised aggression against Korea, Tibet and India, and which strives to foment war and discord in all Asia, Africa, and everywhere chance has allowed.

These ominous threats have waxed for two decades while we have faced them with the sterile strategy of deterrence that is based on the hydrogen bomb, a weapon of mass extermination whose effects cannot be controlled, and which has already poisoned and polluted the world.

This strategy, all by itself, is not only immoral; it is bankrupt. After investing about $300,000,000 in it, the United States finds Communism in control of Cuba, 90 miles from Florida.

The people of Czechoslovakia did not want communism; they had the finest democracy in Europe. The desperate rebels in Hungary were smashed by communist tanks; the people of East Germany are cowed by the Berlin wall, in slavery.

We are never going to beat the threats to liberty that beset us with nothing but H-bombs, and if we go on trying we may easily bring about what Lester Pearson described at Oslo as "The peace of extinction."

And so, looking far back to that remote first armistice day, to the fearful carnage that preceded it, and to the lamentable and bloody events that have succeeded it, it would seem that tyranny holds a sort of perpetual mortgage on freedom.

I believe the only legal tender for payment is human sacrifice and effort, and if we do not make that effort, tyranny will one day foreclose.

BACKGROUND

Did Life Begin In Soil or Sea?

AP, from London

Two British scientists have presented a theory that life began in crevices on dry land rather than in the sea.

They said their work on the suspended animation of primitive organisms suggests their theory has advantages over the classic idea that the sea formed an "organic soup" giving rise to life.

Writing in the magazine New Scientist, professors M. Howard Hinton and M. S. Blum of Bristol University said the sea could provide only a very dilute soup, in which reaction between the complex molecules needed to form living systems would be much a matter of chance.

Much more concentrated conditions, they said, would be found in niches on land, which would be alternately wet and dry.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloated disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

'Party' Firm Again?

The question of whether or not to bring a firm of professionals in to plan and direct the city's centennial party will be decided next week.

A survey report of the John B. Rogers Co., U.S. specialists, was presented to a closed inter-municipal meeting on Monday at which it was suggested that "substantial funds" would be needed to cover celebration of the 1965 centennial of B.C. union and 1967 anniversary of confederation.

A further meeting will be held on Monday and this will be followed by another meeting, probably on Wednesday, at which time it will be decided whether a joint undertaking will be acceptable to all area municipalities.

The John B. Rogers company is the firm which staged Victoria's 100th birthday party in 1962. The company was paid $40,000 for its services.

Large Dock Beats Tide

MONCTON, N.B. (UPI) — A 1,000-ton floating dock, the largest of its kind in the world, was launched Wednesday in the Petitcodiac River about three miles from here.

The dock, measuring 300 feet long and 80 feet wide and 20 feet thick, will be used for berthing facilities at Dorchester Cape, site of a big chemical industrial park.

The dock will help overcome berthing problems caused by high tides on Shipody Bay which has the highest tides in the world, sometimes measuring as long as 46 feet. Officials said the floating dock would be hauled by four tugs to Dorchester Cape today where it will await the arrival of the first ship on Monday.

Prosecutors

Council Admits Error

Considering a protest from the Victoria Bar Association, city council admitted Wednesday that it would have been "more correct" to advertise locally the position of chief city prosecutor rather than hiring a man from Alberta.

"There is little doubt that the end result would have been the same but I feel that we should, perhaps, have advertised local lawyers for the post," said Mayor Wilson.

WILL BE DONE

He added that this would be done in the hiring of two more prosecutors to make up the team of three which will act for the crown here in criminal court, family and children's court and traffic court.

J. W. Anderson, of Edmonton, was chosen for the job at a closed meeting of aldermen on Oct. 22. The appointment of the 41-year-old lawyer, formerly deputy attorney-general for Alberta, was ratified at a later formal meeting of council.

BEST QUALIFIED

The letter from Alan B. Macfarlane, on behalf of the executive of the bar association, described the council action as "unilateral."

"We are of the opinion that the highest degree of co-operation between the city and the bar association" is necessary to ensure that the best qualified men are found to fill judicial positions in this area, said the letter.

NOT APPROACHED

This was not the case in regard to the recent appointment, it states.

Very few members knew that the city was seeking such an appointee. The executive was not approached and local lawyers not circled.

"When competent counsel are sought, one does not have to go to Alberta to find them. The lack of local publicity concerning the intention of the city to appoint a new prosecutor was regrettable," the bar association letter said.

NO REFLECTION

It added that the facilities of the bar association are available to city council and adds that if a salary is offered commensurate with the responsibility of the position to be filled the city will have less difficulty than it has had in the past in filling public positions.

The letter specifies that it is in no way a reflection on the personal ability of the new appointee which undoubtedly is of the highest.

Mutilated Loot

Drop. Appeals

VANCOUVER (CP)—Two men charged in connection with the $1,200,000 mutilated money robbery from a CPR warehouse here earlier this year have abandoned their appeals against a court decision to transfer them to Edmonton for trial.

Joseph Percival, 37, a former Vancouver police constable, and James McDougall, 31, were recently extradited from Scotland to face the charges that they committed the robbery in which the money—each bill mutilated with punched holes and on its way to Ottawa mint for destruction—was stolen.

ON BAIL

The pair were originally arrested in Edmonton a few months after the robbery and were charged there with possessing $12,000 of the loot. They were released on bail after being committed for trial and it was subsequently learned that they had gone to Scotland.

Extradition proceedings were launched when Vancouver police laid the robbery charges here. After being brought back from Scotland the men contended that they should be tried here on the robbery charges first before facing the possession charges in Edmonton.

However, Mr. Justice A. E. BRANCA ruled that the two should be taken to Edmonton to face charges there first.

Alcoa Ready to Rescind Aluminum Price Boosts

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Aluminum Co. of America informed Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara Wednesday night it is willing to rescind its aluminum price increases, a defense department spokesman said.

Alcoa President John Harper and Executive Vice-President

Lee Hickman informed McNamara of the firm's willingness to back off the price increases in a meeting with McNamara and Deputy Defense Secretary Cyrus R. Vance, the spokesman said.

In return, McNamara agreed to the immediate resumption of negotiations for the orderly disposal of 1,400,000 tons of aluminum now held in Government stockpiles. The defense chief also said he believes it would be possible to limit the quantity of metal disposed from the stockpile next year to less than 200,000 tons.

Officials of the general services administration announced Tuesday they had begun making preparations for the immediate sale of 100,000 tons of aluminum from the government's surplus stockpiles.

Nations Break Due to History

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI)—Iran and Syria appeared headed for a break in diplomatic relations because of an historical dispute on whether part of Iran is Iranian or Arab.

Iran announced it was recalling its ambassador from Damascus because of remarks by Syrian presidency council chairman Gen. Admin Hafez last month that Iran's Khuzistan area belongs to the Arabs.

China Slams Russia

TOKYO (UPI)—Communist China Wednesday accused the Soviet Union of collusion with the United States over Viet Nam.

"They (the Russians) serve as a fire-brigade for U.S. imperialism trying to stamp out the flames of revolution," the Soviet Communist Party China Wednesday accused the Peking charged in a New China News Agency broadcast.

"Whenever the people rise up in armed struggle, and wherever U.S. imperialism suffers defeat and finds itself in a predicament, the new leaders of Soviet-U.S. collaboration... hurriedly come forward to help out," China claimed.

China charged in the broadcast monitored here that Russia was trying to pull the Viet Nam question "into the orbit of imperialism, the new leaders of Soviet-U.S. collaboration."

Stadium

Council Willing To Talk

By A. H. MURPHY
City Hall Reporter

City council is quite willing to talk to Victoria Sports council members about placement of the area's Centennial stadium on the University of Victoria campus, alderman indicated Wednesday.

However they did think that sportsmen might be better advised to talk to the special inter-municipal committee set up to iron out details of the huge project rather than to Victoria, which has approved of the siting on the campus and turned its responsibilities over to the inter-municipal group.

Referring to a letter from the stadium committee of the sport council, Ald. Michael Griffin said: "What these people are afraid of is being overrun by university activity. They are afraid that the university will eventually monopolize all the stadium time crowding out city sports generally."

CHANCE OPEN

Representatives from this and other groups would be invited to sit in on a stadium advisory committee, said Mayor Wilson, and they would have ample opportunity to air their views.

However, he said, if they wanted to talk to city council they should be given every opportunity. They will be so informed.

NEXT WEEK

Just what part of Municipal Affairs Dan Campbell's proposed regional plan for the capital district will be submitted for approval of the ratepayers will probably be decided in the next week.

"We will have to decide which of these functions to put to the electors—and fast," said Mayor Wilson. "If we don't opt out we are automatically included in all parts of this plan."

An informal meeting of council will be held sometime between now and Nov. 18 when it is expected, a decision will have been reached.

Nominations will be held at city hall on Nov. 29 to fill the council post which will be left vacant by the resignation of Ald. A. W. Toome, who is running for mayor at the next municipal election.

Christmas carolling will again be held at city hall. It is hoped to repeat the program of last year when school children's choirs presented a program in the council chamber each work-day morning.

PARK PLAN

A green light was given City Manager Dennis Young to start the wheels turning on the proposed $516,000 rehabilitation of Royal Athletic Park.

Mr. Young will take the first steps toward property acquisition and preparation of plans and specifications by engineers and architects.

The program which includes two stadiums, three athletic fields and a ball diamond for the park will be paid for with insurance money and $450,000 from the McPherson legacy to the city.

Commenting on the ban on explosive-type fireworks which went into effect in Greater Victoria this year, Mrs. Sybil Blyth wrote city council to say it was "the best Hal-low'en ever."

★ ★ ★

The usual Christmas bonus of $5 will be sent to the seven old gentlemen who are sole former residents of Mountain View Home.

Pearson Keeps Mum on What Comes Next

By FRASER KELLY
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canadians will have to wait until next week — and perhaps even longer — to learn how Prime Minister Pearson intends to govern the nation with a minority government.

The prime minister made it amply clear after a marathon cabinet meeting Wednesday that he will not tip his hand until after the service votes are in Saturday.

They could conceivably give two seats to the Liberals, giving them 131 of the 265. J. J. Macgavin, (Three Rivers), an independent who used to be a Liberal, will probably support the government.

Thus Prime Minister Pearson would need only one more to get his numerical majority.

Awaiting Votes

In any case the cabinet will meet again Monday to discuss strategy.

Mr. Pearson told newsmen he hoped to be able to indicate to them when the House would be called into session. Observers here feel he will unlikely ask parliament to meet before the middle of January.

He said he is "not even thinking about cabinet changes until the final votes are in."

Forestry Minister Maurice Bouthier will continue as acting agriculture minister, replacing the defeated Harry Hays. Veterans Affairs Minister Roger Teillet will replace Mines and Technical Surveys Minister Watson McNaught in the same capacity.

Prime Minister Pearson chats with reporters

Mr. Pearson now has three choices before him.

He can tender his resignation right away and prepare the way for a party leadership convention in the next few months. He can do a minor cabinet patchup and face parliament with the same team he has now. He can rebuild his cabinet and face parliament with a new team and new programs. Then when the time is right, in the next two years, go to the people again.

The part professionals here completely dismiss is all possibility of the first choice. They seem split between the other two.

But pressure is building within the party in favor of the major shakeup.

It's building up on behalf of Labor leader Jean Marchand and Montreal member John Turner in Quebec and industrialist Robert Winters in Ontario.

It's also building up against the so-called old guard of Quebec — former Justice Minister

Guy Favreau, State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne and Postmaster-General Rene Tremblay. And there is no doubt that Finance Minister Walter Gordon's halo has slipped badly with the party's failure to win a majority.

Enlarge Cabinet

There is still a segment in the party pushing to have Mr. Winters replace Mr. Gordon as finance minister. There have been suggestions—possibly inspired—that Mr. Gordon is prepared to step down voluntarily.

There are similar suggestions about Transport Minister Pickersill and Industry Minister Drury, both of whom have suffered indifferent health in the past year.

There is also a possibility that Mr. Pearson will enlarge the cabinet somewhat. Months ago, for instance, he hinted that transport may be split into two posts.

Health and welfare could be split. And there has been talk of a new department of youth affairs.

Settling Dust

Most of the speculation at this stage is worthless. These are decisions that Prime Minister Pearson alone can make. So far he is not talking — even to his closest confidants.

The feeling here is that he will wait until all the dust from the campaign has settled and the ruins can be viewed dispassionately.

Most of Wednesday's cabinet meeting was spent discussing a backlog of government business and tossing around ideas for a government program in the next session.

Mr. Pearson said he might be prepared to discuss program possibilities next week. At the same time he scotched suggestions that he offered his resignation to his colleagues.

Refused Comment

He said he attended the meeting "as prime minister. It was assumed I was there as prime minister. The matter didn't come up for discussion."

For the first time since his rebuke at the polls, Mr. Pearson showed a flash of anger Wednesday.

On his way into cabinet he had told newsmen he would make no announcements when he finished the meeting.

Yet when he emerged the hall was jammed with newsmen. He literally had to push his way to his office.

However when he returned for the afternoon cabinet session he joked with the two or three newsmen who met him.

"We'll have to do something about this hall . . . if you get tired of waiting go into my office," he smiled.

Broad Street Closing Protested

William A. Boucher

In spite of advances in TB control, up to 500 new cases are discovered in B.C. every year. Fighting this advance is program financed by Christmas seals. Shown above are Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes, honorary chairman of the seal society, and R. A. Barnard, left, president. The 58th annual campaign runs from Nov. 16 to Dec. 31.

Closing off of Broad Street, between View and Fort for use as a T. Eaton Co. Ltd. Christmas display area was vigorously protested in city council Wednesday by Mayfair Merchants' Association.

A previous protest was received at city hall from The Bay and Ald. Robert Baird told aldermen Wednesday that the Hillside Merchants' Association was also up in arms.

FAIR PRICE?

Both The Bay and the Mayfair shopping plaza merchants suggested that if the area was to be given over to the downtown department store a fair rental should be charged. It was earlier suggested that a fair figure would be $3,800.

It was suggested by the city solicitor that action in this matter might have been taken in other years except that what it amounted to was a "dispossession" of Santa Claus—hardly a popular move.

Aldermen Geoffrey Edgell and Millard Mooney felt that the city solicitor should be asked to set a fair price on the rental of the street but Ald. Michael Griffin thought otherwise.

"The silliest arguments go on here," he said. "I don't know why we waste time on nonsense like this. It seems that it can only happen in Victoria."

If any other merchant came up with an idea as good as the one proposed by Eaton's, council would go along with it just as readily, he said.

The bylaw to close off the street received third reading and passage.

HOLIDAY FROM DRUDGERY

An automatic dishwasher can save you about 225 hours of monotonous work each year - for a lifetime. That's almost ten extra holidays a year for important things. Like your family. Or your guests.

HOLIDAY FROM GERMS

Dishes turn out sparkling clean - hygienically clean - because an automatic dishwasher washes them thoroughly in water that's much hotter than your hands could ever stand. No drying needed, either, so they stay clean.

HOLIDAY FROM RED HANDS

With a dishwasher, you seldom touch dirty dish-water or harsh detergents. (The new models clean pots and pans too!) So your hands stay smooth and youthful looking. Pretty soft touch, eh?

SPECIAL "LIFETIME HOLIDAY" OFFERS!

Your appliance dealer is now featuring attractive offers on new built-in and portable automatic dishwashers. See him today for details and a free demonstration. There'll never be a better time to start your Lifetime Holiday from dishes!

Girl of Letters

Nor rain nor hail but only study can halt this pretty postmistress on her appointed rounds. When a new post office was commissioned at Long Beach, Caryl Abbott, 19, and her parents were all appointed postal officials. Thus, University of Victoria boasts among its second year education students, an official postmistress.—(Ian McKinn)

Revise Elections Act

Petition Gains Momentum

A movement to change the Elections Act so hospitalized and aged persons will not miss their votes is gaining momentum.

Mrs. Judy Nyquist, 1849 Carnarvon, has taken up the cause for hundreds of Canadians who lost their votes through no fault of their own.

She reported Wednesday a petition gained about 30 names bringing the total to more than 150.

Authorities from Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals have called her asking that petition forms be sent to the hospitals for circulation in the wards. University of Victoria students have volunteered to canvass for signatures.

MPs George Chatterton and David Gross have already said they will do all they can to help.

Elderly people complained Monday of polling stations having flights of stairs they were unable to negotiate.

Chronic hospital patients who were registered in hospitals can vote there. But those who find themselves in hospital unexpectedly are unable to exercise their franchise.

Mrs. Nyquist wants the act changed to eliminate such eventualities.

'More Information, Please'

Hospital Costs Examined

Victoria city council wants more information before it makes up its mind on the proposed regional hospital district.

The council made no decision Wednesday at its meeting with the Victoria and District Hospitals Planning Committee, which is pushing for tax-based hospital construction in place of the existing voluntary donation system.

Led by Mayor R. B. Wilson, councillors sought a more detailed analysis of how a hospital district might be financed. A second meeting will be held.

NO CHANGE

The committee has forecast that $13,573,400 must be raised for hospital construction in the next five years. Of this $5,732,500 must be raised by the community under the existing cost-sharing formula.

Health minister Martin said this week that no change in the formula is planned in the next two years at least.

TWO MILLS

The committee and municipal affairs minister Campbell have estimated that two mills levied on all Greater Victoria real estate would pay for hospital construction.

Medical administrators of Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals reported at Wednesday's meeting that a total of 1652 area residents are waiting for surgery.

WAIT A YEAR

Said Dr. Ralph Adams, medical director of St. Joseph's: "It's my considered opinion that if we don't get more construction soon, then the city of Victoria is in for the same situation that exists in Calgary, where people have to wait as much as a year for surgery."

Mayor Wilson asked whether the communities' share would be raised out of current spending, or by loan.

"If at the end of five years you need another $5,000,000 and the old debt isn't paid off, what do you do then?" he said.

"The two mills is obviously not going to do it on a cash basis," he said. "This looks like a six-mill increase for next year."

MORE INFORMATION

Committee members replied that the two-mill estimate had been made by the government. "If we're going to get behind you we'll need more information," said the mayor.

Red China Seat Urged By Friendship Group

The Victoria branch of the Canada-China Friendship Association is urging the federal government to have Canadian representatives vote in favor of a mission of the People's Republic of China to the United Nations.

A telegram urging the admission of Red China was sent to Prime Minister Pearson by the Victoria organization, Wednesday.

"As prime minister, you now have an opportunity to show whether you stand for a strong United Nations Organization, or whether, under your leadership, Canada will merely echo U.S. policy," the telegram states.

Consumed in 20 Minutes

Boy, 16, Drinks Full Bottle of Rum, Dies

By PETER TAYLOR

NANAIMO—A 16-year-old boy took 30 minutes to drink a 26-ounce bottle of rum in his home here.

He drank slowly and steadily, finished the bottle, lay down on his bed and died.

"As members of the white race we have failed these people miserably, and now we are reaping the harvest."

That was the comment of coroner Russ Inkster, at the Wednesday night inquest into the death of Indian lad Ronald Drake, 644 Victoria Road.

The jury ruled the boy died Oct. 31 on his bed in his home, of asphyxiation, after consuming an excessive amount of alcohol.

Medical testimony at the inquest indicated the boy's lungs were almost completely filled with stomach contents, taken into the lungs during his drugged sleep.

His blood alcohol count was 36 per cent.

The inquest learned the boy's father is a Campbell River fisherman.

His mother was out with a friend on the night of Oct. 30. Viola Agnes Drake, 18, cousin of the dead youth, was at the Drake home during the evening, and gave this account of events to the inquest.

"About 6:30 p.m. Ronnie went out of the house, and a short time later he came back with a bottle of rum.

"He was just gone a few minutes.

"He didn't say anything; he just went and sat down in the living room.

"He started drinking from the bottle.

"It took him about 20 minutes to half an hour to drink it all.

"At 7:30 he went in and lay down on his bed. He was still lying there when I left at 9:15 p.m."

He was discovered early next morning, dead.

Kenneth Paul White, 18, 604 Centre, said he visited the Drake home two days earlier, and had a full bottle of rum in his jacket pocket.

He said when he left he found the bottle was missing.

Bucks Shut Out Leafs To Share First Place

PORTLAND—Hal Laycoe does not like his Portland Buckaroos to make the same mistake once, let alone twice, and three times would be intolerable. So they went out and clobbered Victoria Maple Leafs with three goals in the first period here last night and went on to win, 6-0, to tie the Leafs for first place in the Western Hockey League.

In previous meetings with the Leafs, the Bucks had started as though their feet hurt, trailing 3-0 in Victoria and 4-1 in Portland. Then they finished strongly and lost one-goal decisions, 3-2 and 4-3. But there was no such hesitancy this time as they recorded the first shutout of the WHL season.

It was 2:08 of the first period when Arnie Schmutz got his first goal and first point of the year. Art Jones scored on a power play at 7:03 after a penalty by Sandy Hucul, and Dick Van Impe got his first of three at 16:15.

Van Impe, who had also gone goal-less in Portland's first 10 games, added two more in the third and Jack Bionda got the other goal on a bounce pass at 17:00.

Any way you cared to look at it, the Leafs came out losers.

Millar and Don Head of Portland had been tied for goaltending honors with a 2.5 average. Head shot into the lead.

STREAK GONE
Portland extended its winning to five games; Victoria's unbeaten streak ended at seven.

Fred Hucul, chasing Portland's Art Jones for the scoring lead, was stymied at 17:03 when he had a goal and an assist, and leads with 20 points.

A crowd of 9,691, second largest of the season in the WHL, watched the Bucks completely dominate a Victoria club that managed only 19 shots, four in the third period.

Buckaroos get a chance, to break the first-place tie against the Totems Friday in Seattle, then come to Victoria Saturday for another go at the Leafs.

In last night's other game in San Francisco, Pittsburgh Hornets shut out the Seals, 4-0, getting goals from Norm Beaudin, Bob Wall, Claude LaForge and Andre Pronovost.

Court Ruling Vital

One More Year In Milwaukee?

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Major league baseball faced the choice today of remaining in Milwaukee or risking an anti-trust suit in Wisconsin courts, a prospect that a baseball lawyer said "could lead to the ruin of the game as we know it."

The dilemma, which left Wisconsin and Milwaukee County in position to bargain to keep the Braves from shifting to Atlanta next season, developed Tuesday in U.S. district court.

Judge Robert E. Teahan ruled that Wisconsin courts should decide the anti-trust suit filed by Wisconsin's attorney - general.

The ruling, which cannot be appealed, means the anti-trust suit will reach the federal courts only after being heard in Wisconsin.

The state is now free to seek an injunction in its own courts against the Braves' shift to Atlanta, planned for 1966.

Should an injunction be granted, it could keep the Braves in Milwaukee until the case clears the Wisconsin courts. That could be well after the start of the 1966 season.

IMPLICATIONS DEEP
The implications raised by the ruling go deeper than just the Braves' case.

Earl Jinkinson, Braves' attorney, acknowledged as much when he told Judge Teahan prior to his ruling that if Wisconsin could control the activities of baseball "it would lead to the ruin of the game as we know it."

"If Wisconsin can do this, then all the other states too can claim they are being prevented from having teams. We might wind up with 60 teams."

Baseball fought to have the case heard in the federal courts. Jinkinson argued that the case should be heard together with a federal anti-trust suit filed against the league by Milwaukee County.

TOO ORGANIZED
The suit maintains that the National League is so organized as to create a monopoly in the employment of players of major league quality, as well as in the scheduling and the broadcast of games.

The suit also strikes at the authority of the commissioner of baseball and the sacrosanct reserve clause, which enables a baseball club to have complete control of its players as a property right.

NEVER BEEN REVIEWED
Baseball's peculiar structure has never come under full-scale judicial review.

Wisconsin and Milwaukee County officials were guarded in their public comments on the ruling, but privately they were elated.

One said: "It was a very significant ruling. Now we hope it will go further and possibly give Milwaukee a chance to expand or buy the Braves."

One official close to the group trying to purchase a franchise for Milwaukee said: "I think baseball is now faced with a decision. I think they'll be willing to talk to us now."

Mantha For Hunt

VANCOUVER (UPI)—The Vancouver Canucks Wednesday traded defenceman Les Hunt to the Seattle Totems for defenceman Moe Mantha.

Vancouver general manager Max McNab said the move was designed to strengthen the Canucks' power play. Mantha, 32, scored 48 goals during the past three seasons. Hunt, 28, is basically a defensive-type player, and scored only three times last year.

Hull Horse-Collared

Black Hawks Back on NHL Throne

By The Canadian Press

Chicago Black Hawks extended their unbeaten streak to seven games and took over undisputed possession of first place in the National Hockey League Wednesday night by whipping defending champion Detroit Red Wings 5-2.

Scoring champ Stan Mikita paced Chicago to its sixth victory against one tie with two goals, his second coming in the last period while teammate Eric Nesterenko was serving a five-minute penalty. But Bobby Hull, their ace point-getter, was blanked.

The triumph moved the Hawks into the top spot, one point ahead of Montreal Canadiens, who played to a 3-3 tie with the Leafs in Toronto.

In another game at New York, Ed Westfall's third-period goal gave Boston Bruins a 2-2 come-from-behind tie with the Rangers.

At Chicago, Billy Harris gave the Red Wings a short-lived lead early in the second period when a shot by Paul Henderson bounced off his pads and trickled behind Chicago goalie Glenn Hall.

Len Lunde tied the score less than three minutes later, taking a pass near the Detroit blue line and skating in to beat Detroit net-minder Roger Crozier with a 10-footer.

Mikita hit the first of his two goals one minute, 43 seconds later when Ken Wharram slid the puck to him from behind the Detroit net. Mikita then whipped a 15-footer into the cage.

Last night's game: Montreal 3 at Toronto 3; Boston 2 at New York 2; Detroit 2 at Chicago 5.

Next game: Tonight—New York at Detroit.

Seven-a-Side

Rugby Event Today

Annual seven-a-side rugby tournament, sponsored by the Oak Bay Wanderers, will be held at Macdonald Park this afternoon.

Thirteen teams are entered in the Remembrance Day knockout event. A consolation round may also be held if time permits.

James Bay Athletic Association will be represented by three teams, as will Oak Bay and University of Victoria.

Georgians have two clubs entered and the other two are the RCN Technical School at the RCN Pacific Command side.

First game is at 1 p.m. with the final billed for 4:15.

Things got hectic around Ranger goal

guson and Dick Duff, a former Leaf, scored for the Canadiens.

A crowd of 14,723 saw Ellis cut Montreal's margin to 3-2 with a power-play goal at 5:07 of the third after Ferguson drew a double minor and Ted Harris a tripping minor to leave the Canadiens two men short. Ellis banged home a pass from Frank Mahovlich.

It was the only power-play goal of the game and sparked the Leafs, losers of three in a row before the contest, to a strong third-period finish.

Kurtenbach, who went to Toronto in a deal last June with Boston Bruins, got the tying goal at 8:56 when he lofted Ellis' rebound over Montreal goaltender Lorne Gump Worsley, who was sprawled in front of the net.

KEY GOAL
Westfall, a converted defenceman playing at centre this year, beat Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin on a 20-footer at 2:14 of the third period to climax Boston's comeback.

The Rangers scored twice in the first 10 minutes of play, grabbing a quick 2-0 lead. John McKenzie scored his third goal of the season at 3:15 and then Phil Goyette clicked with his second of the season and 100th of his NHL career at 9:40.

Parker MacDonald got Boston on the scoreboard at 13:17 of the opening period, 44 seconds after Giacomin was forced to leave because of an injury. He was replaced by Don Simmons.

The tie extended the Rangers' unbeaten string to five games.

Vic High One Two In Race

Victoria High and Claremont settled their running cross-country feud yesterday as Vic High won an invitational four-mile run.

Jim Eaton of Vic High won in 19:17, followed by teammate Brian Kidson 40 seconds later. Next three positions were taken by Claremont's Greg Newton, Phil Owen and John Sheldrake.

On the reverse scoring system, Vic High won with 16 points, followed by Claremont with 33, Shawnigan Lake School, 46, and Esquimalt, 63.

The leaders:
1. Jim Eaton (Vic) 19:17; 2. Brian Kidson (VHS) 19:57; 3. George Newton (C) 20:06; 4. Phil Owen (C) 20:09; 5. John Sheldrake (C) 20:08; 6. Peter Roddick (VHS); 7. Tom Anderson (VHS) 20:41; 8. Fred Williamson (C) 20:56; 9. Ed Chapman (SL) 20:57; 10. Tom Hanson (SL) 21:07.

Public access into logging areas for hunting may be somewhat of a schlemmer this holiday weekend, because of changed work schedules at some operations, but here is how we sort it out at press time.

Nitinat Lake—Nitinat River area will be closed both today and Friday because MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River employees in that Franklin River division work today and are off Friday and B.C. Forest Products employees are off today but work Friday. The company operations overlap in that Nitinat area.

First weekend access to Nitinat area will be 5 p.m. Friday.

The Franklin River to Barnfield area will be closed today and open Friday with access only from the Port Alberni end and not from the Cowichan Lake area.

Cowichan Lake logging area will be open today as loggers take Remembrance Day off, but will be closed Friday when loggers are back at work.

Nanaimo Lakes is expected to be open today, closed Friday.

Port Renfrew area will be open Thursday, closed Friday. MacPowell operations at Menzies Bay and Kelsey Bay will be closed today, but open Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

All other MacPowell operations, including Northwest Bay, Sprout Lake Division, Copper Canyon and Shawigan divisions will be open today, closed Friday and open for the weekend, as are all logging claims.

Hunters are not expected to even walk in to the areas while loggers are working.

Sooke area will be open today, Friday, Saturday and Sunday because loggers in that area took their Remembrance Day holiday last Saturday.

Latest report we have from Joe Gregory at Tofino is that the big Canada geese have started to arrive at the hunting flats and quite a few hunters are already working the area.

For those who might be rigging up a heavy salmon line for winter spring fishing a typographical error crept into Sunday's column which could make quite a difference. From the five pound lead ball use 20 feet of 90-pound test leader, not 200 feet as it came out in the story.

Saanich Inlet is giving up the best fishing of the year so far with most boats clicking on winter springs.

Jim Gilbert says "if you know how to fish winter springs you will get them, with an average of two to a boat. Best time is daybreak until 10 a.m. with Bamberton most productive side for six to 14-pounders. Jacksprings are in MacKenzie Bay and try Tod Inlet for the big ones in the late afternoon until dark. Use 100 to 150 feet and planer, plug, minnow or herring strip."

May Hall reports "the biggest run of winter springs and jacksprings in years in the Inlet, and also lots of legal size blues. The springs are real tackle busters and about every third angler has a sad story of the big one that got away."

Misery Bay, Chesterfield Rock and Goldstream Island are all producing at all fishing depths.

Sooke, Pedder Bay, Victoria waterfront and Oak Bay are all producing good winter spring fishing. Duncan Bay in the Campbell River area is also producing springs.

Cowichan River at the top end is giving up some nice trout fishing (see next Sunday's column) with a single salmon egg, or salmon fly, best bet. Most of the fish are rather dark rainbows with a smattering of browns and the odd cutthroat.

Pretty well the full length of the Cowichan River is a good bet now.

In fact all rivers and lakes are worthwhile for trout and it is almost time to watch for the first winter steelhead.

Paste is producing big trout at creek mouths in Cowichan Lake, with trolled lures also working fairly well. Great Central Lake is reported good at the foot, not far from The Ark Resort.

Annual meeting of Esquimalt Anglers' Association will be tonight, 8 p.m., in Jubilee Hall on Fraser Street. Annual wind-up dance, banquet and prize presentations of EDA will be Nov. 19 in Jubilee Hall starting at 9 p.m.

Mays

They Liked Willie

BOSTON (AP)—Willie Mays, San Francisco Giants' centre fielder, won the National League's Most Valuable Player Award Wednesday for the second time, outdistancing Los Angeles' Sandy Koufax and Maury Wills.

The 34-year-old Mays, who first won the award in 1954, was the only player named on all 20 ballots cast by two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in each of the 10 National League cities.

He received nine first-place votes, 10 seconds and one third in piling up 224 points in the balloting.

Ken Boyer of St. Louis Cardinals received 243 points with 14 first-place votes in winning the honor in 1964, but didn't receive a point this year.

Koufax, who captured the Cy Young Memorial Award as baseball's top pitcher after a 26-8 record this year, polled 177 points, while Wills, the Dodgers' speedy shortstop, drew 164.

Mays became only the fifth player since 1931 to win the coveted MVP Award more than once. Stan Musial captured the honor in 1943, '46 and '48; Roy Campanella in '51, '53 and '55; Carl Hubbell in '33 and '36; and Ernie Banks in '58 and '59.

Appearing in 157 games in a vain bid to lead the Giants to the pennant, Mays led the major leagues with 53 homers and 359 total bases. He topped the National League in runs scored with 119. He drove in 112 runs while compiling a .317 batting average.

UBC Birds Here Friday

UBC Thunderbirds, who represented Canada in the 1964 Olympic Games hockey tournament, will visit Esquimalt Sports Centre, Friday, to play University of Victoria Vikings.

There have been many changes on the Thunderbird roster, but one Olympic player expected to see action is Gary Dineen, the highly-rated forward still being wooed by Toronto Maple Leafs.

Game time is 8 p.m.

George Royal Facing Hard-Baked Course

LAUREL, Md. (CP)—George Royal, the British Columbia horse seeking Canada's first victory in five attempts at the $100,000 Washington International here today, is in "real good shape."

Today's running of the Washington International will be heard live on CBU (880) today at 12:40 p.m., according to the station, and a tape of the race will be shown on channel 3 Friday night at 6.

The word came from co-owner Robert Hall of Alderbrook, B.C., who suggested the overnight odds of 6 to 1 on George Royal might shorten by post time.

At that rating, the big bay four-year-old is favored fourth behind the United States' Roman Brother, 6 to 5; the French Diatome, 3 to 1; and Britain's Super Sam, 5 to 1.

The American Hall to All is rated an 8-4-1 shot, Berenjenal of Argentina, 10 to 1, and the French Caravin 12 to 1.

The hard track indicated was not to George Royal's liking, but the abrupt withdrawal Wednesday of the American Hill Rise was taken as a plus sign.

DEVELOPED FEVER

Hill Rise, second choice to take the $150,000 International, developed a fever Wednesday and was withdrawn to climax a series of misfortunes that has plagued the 1 1/4-mile grass course race since Laurel's race track officials started putting the field together.

The four-year-old from George A. Pope Jr.'s El Peco ranch of California, last horse to be invited to the race, was found to be running a 103-degree temperature after he had worked three furlongs in a snappy 36 seconds. Normal temperature for a horse is 100 degrees.

TO BEAR 127 POUNDS

Roman Brother, George Royal and Berenjenal all will bear 127 pounds to 120 pounds for the younger entries.

Hall and trainer Don Richardson said they don't attach much weight to George Royal's No. 7 starting position.

For the first time at this event, which lacks the lustre of previous ones, the electric starting gate will be used.

As for strategy, that probably will be left to jockey Willie Shoemaker, selected after Johnny Longden was set down for 10 days on the West Coast. Longden had been riding George Royal.

The weatherman saw possibilities of showers, but the hardbaked track could use some water.

'Tasks to Protect B.C. Tel Subscribers'

VANCOUVER (CP) — C. W. Brazier, counsel for the province of B.C., set for the Board of Transport Commissioners

Wednesday several tasks which he said must be carried out to assure that the interests of B.C. Telephone Co. subscribers are protected.

He detailed them in presenting argument before the Board during the third week of the Board's public review of the telephone company.

The public hearings adjourned Wednesday afternoon until Friday at 9 a.m. They are expected to be concluded by noon Friday.

RELATED PROFITS

Among the tasks Mr. Brazier contended the Board should carry out is an examination of the profits of certain companies related to B.C. Tel through the General Telephone System to determine whether the prices B.C. Tel pays for equipment and services from these companies are reasonable.

He said examination of the financial statements of these supply companies is essential.

CHECK NEEDED

He suggested that while he has seen nothing to indicate that the B.C. Tel payments to these related companies are excessive, the Board cannot fully satisfy itself on this point without determining whether the related companies are earning excessive profits on the business they do with B.C. Tel.

He said the Board should request from B.C. Tel the financial statements for 1959 through 1965 for Automatic Electric Company of Canada, the Dominion Director Company, Canadian Telephones and Supplies Ltd., and Lenkurt Electric of Canada, which are related to B.C. Tel through control by General Telephone and Electronics Corp.

Mr. Brazier also called on the Board to maintain close scrutiny on the company's pension costs.

He said that the cost of increasing the employee pension benefits by the amount contributed in the Canada Pension Plan should not be considered allowable operating expenses when the Board is setting the basis for telephone rates.

Mr. Brazier also said the Board should not permit charitable contributions made by the company to be charged as an operating expense for rate-making purposes, arguing that such donations — except where they might bring a business benefit to the company — should be charged to shareholders rather than subscribers.

Beauty Contest Slated

TORONTO (CP)—Miss Canada 1966 will be chosen Sunday from 24 beauties from across the country.

The winner of the pageant will get a $1,000 scholarship, $5,000 in cash, more than $15,000 in merchandise and a year's work as a Canadian good-will ambassador.

Linda Douma, a third-year arts student at the University of Victoria, was last year's winner. She took trips to such places as Tokyo, Beirut and Cyprus.

The Miss Canada pageant is not connected with the Miss Dominion of Canada contest held annually at Niagara Falls, Ont.

Strangest Concert of All!

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadian violinist Hyman Bress performed one of the few musical concerts heard in blacked-out New York City Tuesday night, and it probably was the strangest concert of his career.

The Philharmonic Hall at Lincoln Centre had been nearly sold out for Bress' appearance, but the power blackout hit the city before the audience could assemble. Only about 20 ticket-holders and some 50 stagehands, ushers, mechanics and other centre employees were in the building.

So under the dim light of a couple of battery-powered emergency lamps, they all went into the auditorium and took seats, while Bress went onto the dark stage with his violin.

And for 20 minutes the gloom was filled with the strains of Reger's Sonata in A Minor.

Then Bress took a bow toward the applause coming from the gloom, and his audience gradually drifted out of the hall.

John D Charges Liberals Concealed Facts

By RON COLLISTER

Ottawa Bureau

PRINCE ALBERT — Tory leader John Diefenbaker charged last night that, 24 hours after the election, the government had set a course towards tight money, lessened industrial expansion and fewer jobs.

Reacting to Finance Minister Walter Gordon's call for a halt to Canadian borrowing in the U.S. until next year, Mr. Diefenbaker said:

"Now, the election over, they announce what was agreed and concealed from the electorate until after the election was over.

"To have told the truth during the election would have been hurtful to the Liberal cause," he added.

Mr. Diefenbaker blasted Finance Minister Gordon's action as his train turned homeward to Ottawa, where he is due to arrive Friday night.

Early next week, there will be a parliamentary caucus with some familiar faces who have been absent for the past 21 months, including George Hees, Dave Fulton and Richard Bell.

Last night, Mr. Diefenbaker referred to Gordon's statement and newspaper reports that stated:

"The step, announced in Ottawa and in Washington, came without prior warning the day after the federal election. It had apparently been pending for some time."

During the election campaign, Mr. Diefenbaker recalled, the Tories said that Walter Gordon was following "a financial policy made in Washington, arising out of agreement reached in July, 1963, and renewed by Mr. Gordon on July 30 this year.

"We said that the policy had produced rising prices, a huge deficit with the U.S., the transferring of their balance of payments problem to Canada; and that tight money would result."

When the Tories forecast this sequence of events, he said, there was no reply from the Liberal Party leaders. He accused the government of making a deal in Washington committing Canada to financial policies not in the best interest of Canada.

Mr. Gordon, he pointed out, has also predicted a "substantial current account deficit."

That, too, had been predicted by the Tories in the campaign.

"No reply was made," he said. "That, too, was concealed."

Mr. Diefenbaker assailed Mr. Gordon, a favorite target during the campaign, for "playing fast and loose with the Canadian people."

He had concealed the true situation, that "our deficit situation has worsened, particularly with regard to the payments position with the U.S."

Mr. Diefenbaker insisted that as a result of agreements made in Washington "they have tied Canada's financial policies to the needs of the American balance of payments position."

"As a result of pressure from Washington, they have passed on the problem to Canadian consumers."

This, he warned, is hitting Canadians in the shape of higher prices, increased deficits with the U.S. and, now, a situation leading inevitably to tight money, lessened industrial expansion and fewer jobs."

During the campaign, Mr. Diefenbaker often warned that tight money would be one of the "unpopular measures" that would follow a Liberal return to power.

Just as often, he had called on Prime Minister Pearson to answer the question: Is there tight money ahead, after election day?

Bond Issues May Be Deferred

Squeeze Follows Freeze

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial government commissions and municipal councils may bear the brunt of new U.S. — Canadian moves to defer further big bond borrowings from the U.S. money market until after the new year starts.

A source here said it was expected that about $250,000,000 in Canadian bonds would be offered in New York in the final months of this year.

The squeeze announced Tuesday night by Finance Minister Gordon first affected a proposed $50,000,000 borrowing sought in New York by Hydro-Quebec.

GENERAL BID

The offering was to have been made Tuesday for general bidding, and Hydro-Quebec expected to pick up the cash next Monday as part of its expansion financing. Instead, after Ottawa-Washington talks, the bids weren't opened and the issue was withdrawn.

Within the past few days, the Manitoba Hydro Electric Board borrowed $15,000,000 in U.S. funds on 25-year bonds, and New Brunswick borrowed $10,000,000 on 25-year debentures.

MONEY MARKET

Provincial and municipal governments and their agencies in Canada tend to go to the U.S. money market to float major bond issues because of the big pool of capital available in New York. It usually is more expensive and more difficult to place the same kind of securities in Canada.

Mr. Gordon's statement did not specifically put a ban on Canadian borrowings in the United States, but asked Canadian authorities to defer bringing U.S. funds into Canada until after Jan. 1. The effect of this, however, was to close out the U.S. money market temporarily to Canadian bond and debenture offerings.

SURPRISE

The announcement was made the day after the federal general election, and while it came as a surprise for the way it sharpened attention on the balance of payments problem, it flowed from earlier discussions.

In 1963, Canada undertook not to increase its official holdings of gold and U.S. dollars at the expense of U.S. indebtedness. With this promise, Canada gained exemption from the new U.S. interest equalization tax, a measure designed to curb the outflow of dollars from the U.S.

DEMAND BUILT

Until the new tax was written into law by Congress last year there was uncertainty about its application to some new Canadian issues and so a backlog of demand was built up. Then Canadian borrowings in New York became heavy.

Offerings of Canadian securities in the U.S. money market were $91,000,000 in the first quarter of 1964, $238,000,000 in the second quarter, $308,000,000 in the third quarter, and $359,000,000 in the last quarter.

WILL IMPROVE

They were $344,000,000 in the first quarter of this year and $244,000,000 in the second. Third quarter figures for this year are not final and the fourth quarter figure of $250,000,000 is only a projection.

Officials are confident the situation will improve after the new year begins.

Socred Winner Now Predicts Party May Unite

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—A successful Social Credit candidate said Wednesday there is a good chance of the two Social Credit groups in Canada reuniting as a result of Monday's federal election.

Bert Leboe, re-elected in Cariboo constituency, said the fact that there is a near balance between members of the Social Credit party and the Creditists of Quebec increased chances of their joining forces.

In the last parliament there were nine Social Crediters and 13 Creditists, Quebec Social Crediters who broke away from the national party.

Nine Creditists and five Social Crediters were elected Monday.

Mr. Leboe said he hopes the Creditists send observers to the Social Credit national convention in Edmonton later this month.

Power Flow Reversal Blamed

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario Hydro experts examining the reasons for Tuesday night's widespread power failure are sure of one thing.

This province's part of the blackout that snarled business and home life, traffic and communications in the densely-populated area of Ontario and the northeastern United States was caused by a reversal of a scheduled power flow.

WHERE, WHY?

But officials of the publicly-owned Ontario Hydro - Electric Power Commission were at a loss to explain exactly where or why the reversal began.

Ontario hydro spokesmen said Wednesday that under a power-exchange program between Canada and the United States—called CANUSE for Canada-United States eastern interconnection—power is distributed to Ontario and various companies in New York state and south to the Gulf of Mexico and west to Montana.

Ontario hydro officials said that at the time of the failure—5:16 p.m. Tuesday—the schedule called for 500,000 kilowatts to be entering the province at Niagara Falls from the power authority of the state of New York. Of this total, 200,000 kilowatts were for the use of Ontario and the other 300,000 were to be routed over provincial hydro lines back to New York state through Cornwall, Ont.

However, due to the unexpected reversal, 200,000 kilowatts were entering the U.S. through Niagara Falls and 100,000 were coming into Ontario through Cornwall. These figures don't balance with the scheduled flow but Ontario hydro was unable to explain this either.

The reversal of the flow automatically triggered devices in the affected areas of Ontario, removing from service about 3,800,000 kilowatts. It also isolated the province from the New York state and Michigan power systems.

RE-ESTABLISHED

Connections with U.S. systems were re-established within minutes and Ontario began building up its power with supplies from thermal generating systems at Lakeview, Ont., the Hearn station near Toronto and the J. C. Keith generating system in Windsor, Ont. and with power from Quebec and the Detroit Edison system.

Electricity was restored to parts of Ontario but a third breakdown—this time due to trouble between Ontario Hydro's Moose River generation and Detroit Edison—occurred at 7:24.

SERVICE RESTORED

Full service was almost completely restored to the province by 8:30 p.m. with the help of power from Hydro-Quebec and Detroit Edison.

The blackout tied up an estimated 200,000 commuters on street cars, subway trains and trolley buses in Toronto, transit commission officials said.

Toronto International Airport used emergency power systems but flights to Kennedy and La Guardia airports in New York were cancelled because of a lack of lighting there.

Most hospitals had auxiliary power units but encountered trouble with their elevators.

Bob Munro, 26, organizer for the Peace Action League, said the group is not trying to detract from those who died in the wars, and will stand aside during today's ceremonies.

strators from the Peace Action League, University Peace Club and high school students, ends at 5 p.m. today. High Court Backs Douglas Treaty

Indian Rights Upheld Over B.C. Game Act

Island Editor

B.C. game laws do not apply to Indians on Vancouver Island, the Supreme Court of Canada, ruled Wednesday.

This is a complete victory for Island Indians, in a case that has travelled the long road to the highest court in Canada from a Nanaimo magistrate's court trial of two Indians.

And the men who started the whole process, Indian hunters Clifford White and David Bob, were among the last to learn the supreme court's decision.

Mr. Bob, at Nanose, and Mr. White, at Cedar, were not in telephone contact.

In making its decision, the supreme court upheld treaties signed by the Hudson's Bay Company in 1854.

The treaties were signed by

The judgment was greeted with enthusiasm by Island Indian officials.

"This is a great victory for us," said Edward Elliot of Owi-chian Indian Band.

Mr. Elliot, who was among those responsible for the progress of the White-Bob case to the supreme court, added "It is a very logical decision."

"If the government makes a treaty, surely it should live up to it. I think there are a lot of white people who will be in favor of this decision."

Crown Plea Rejected

"The provincial government, if they had been sincere in their dealings with us, would not have taken the case to the supreme court."

Seven supreme court justices rejected Crown arguments that James Douglas signed the treaties the wrong way.

For blankets and other "considerations" the Indians signed over their lands "to the white people forever" with the understanding "that we are at liberty to hunt over the unoccupied lands and to carry on our fisheries as formerly."

The supreme court upheld these provisions of the treaties. But one Indian official who had some reservations was Dave

Moon, chief councillor of Cape Mudge Band.

"I don't like the idea of anyone, including Indians, fishing without a permit," said Mr. Moon.

"Some might abuse this privilege. They could take a net into the boat while this fishing is taking place."

"Then, they would be tempted to sell fish."

"I believe fish caught in this manner should be only for consumption of the Indians, and no white man should be allowed on the boat while this fishing is taking place."

With these reservations, Mr. Moon said "the ruling is very good for all Indian people on the Island."

After Season Closed

The case started when Mr. White and Mr. Bob, both members of the Sasequun tribe, were convicted of being in illegal possession of game after being found with the carcasses of six deer near Nanaimo July 7, 1963. It was two weeks after the close of hunting season.

The conviction and fines of $100 each were wiped out in a new trial on the original magistrate's court decision, and the provincial court of appeal upheld the Indians.

Lawyer for the two hunters was Tom Berger of Vancouver who offered as argument, the BNA act which says the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction to legislate on Indians.

Ben Jack, brother of the elected chief of Nootka band and himself hereditary chief of Nootka and Muchalat bands, admitted the supreme court's ruling puts the seal of approval on established practice of Indian hunters.

Mr. Jack, whose tribe includes the hard-pressed Friendly Cove Indians, said "we have always hunted for what we needed, we had to. And we had to get it when we needed it."

He said, "Many Indians still hunt deer and birds for food for their families, as they did in the old days."

"We always felt we had a right to do this, and we had to do it."

Boosts Indian Morale

Ron Sampson, Indian agent at Duncan, said the supreme court's decision will be a morale-booster for Island Indians.

He said he was certain Indians will not take advantage of the ruling.

"Whites may consider this a case of special privilege, but I prefer to think of it as a basic right."

"We (white people) must not forget these people once held possession of all the territory in the province."

Nanaimo Indian chief Doug White could see no problems arising from the supreme court decision.

He said "I'm very very happy with the verdict."

He was a member of a small committee that spearheaded the appeal against the conviction of Mr. White and Mr. Bob on principle.

Mr. White said there would not be a sudden rush of his people to start killing off the deer. "Indians are the best conservationists," he said.

Duncan cougar hunter Harry Bradshaw, who has hunted in the district for 40 years, said "I don't think the verdict makes much difference, provincial game biologists just want to get rid of the deer anyhow."

He claimed, "these biologists are obviously not interested in protecting the deer, they left the doe and fawn season open this year after the big winter kill."

"That did so much damage the Indian right will make little difference."

Days Look Bleak Now Sam Is Dead

Family Grounded

The Burke Family Singers, scheduled to perform at McPherson Playhouse, have been grounded by a blizzard in Calgary. The 12-member family found themselves unable to leave Calgary by car or airplane Wednesday, and so notified playhouse manager Erik Perth they would be unable to make their engagement here.

Sam died Tuesday, and things are going to be pretty bleak around Woolworth's without him. Sam's rasping voice made him a favorite with children and pensioners, some of whom visited him daily.

A mynah bird, Sam was never for sale and lived for almost eight years in the store's pet department as unofficial mascot.

Sam had been ill for a short time with what was thought to be a cold.

Moves Toward Town Status

View Royal Says No to Merger

Amalgamation of View Royal and Esquimalt has been washed out.

The View Royal Ratepayers' Association was all but unanimous Tuesday night in asking the district's fire trustees to proceed with a bylaw asking for a change of status from local district to town.

The resolution asked that the trustees have the bylaw drawn up soon as possible. A three-fifths majority of ratepayers voting is required to make the vote law.

Some 150 ratepayers attended the meeting.

Association president Gar Bulmer counted five dissenters in the vote to approve drawing up of the township bylaw.

At an earlier meeting a motion to form a township was tabled to allow a time for a study of alternatives to be made.

One alternative suggested was amalgamation with Esquimalt municipality.

Meanwhile B. C. Bracewell, former deputy of municipal affairs was retained by Esquimalt and View Royal to prepare a report on amalgamation. The report was studied at last night's meeting along with a report by the association on formation of a township.

High-Rise Apartments

Chant Calls Foul On City Zone Plan

Works Minister W. N. Chant said Wednesday there is an "understanding" between the city and province that no high-rise apartments be built adjacent to the provincial precinct.

The city is not carrying out the spirit of the understanding in zoning precinct border areas for construction of high-rise apartments, he said.

"I would have to check to see if there is anything in writing, but that is my understanding."

The city is wrong to allow the precinct to be "boxed-in," he said.

ASSESSES NEEDS

Earlier, Mayor Wilson said the province had ample warning of the city's plans.

It was suggested the province assess its needs in light of growth and take steps to consolidate property and take advantage of current land prices.

"But it seems that little has been done except for establishment of a parking lot," the mayor said.

PARKING AREA

Mr. Chant said he "resents the implication the province has not been doing much about the precinct area."

"We have bought 39 properties and spent close to $600,000 on them in the precinct area," he said. "We've also spent a lot of money developing a parking area."

PROTEST BRIEF

Deputy works minister E. Webb earlier read a brief of protest at a public hearing which preceded final passage of a re-zoning bylaw allowing Mace Homes and Investments limited to build a high-rise adjacent to the precinct.

Passage was consequently delayed a day to allow Mr. Webb to negotiate with the company.

When no progress was reported the following day, council passed the bylaw.

Students Will Vote On Free-Hike Balk

University of Victoria students will hold a plebiscite Nov. 19 to indicate whether they favor withholding this year's $56 tuition fee increase.

Paul Williamson, president of the student council, said Wednesday that the plebiscite must pass by 75 per cent before any action is taken.

If three-quarters of the students approve, then they will be asked to pledge they will withhold $56 from their second-term fees, due in January.

"We're not willing to go ahead with it unless we have substantial support," said Mr. Williamson.

This year tuition fees were raised to $428, payable in halves at the beginning of the fall and spring terms.

Inter-High Paper Topic of Meeting

University and high school students are expected to meet the Greater Victoria School Board Monday to discuss a proposed inter-high school newspaper.

A report in The Martlet, the University of Victoria's campus paper, says that the joint high school paper was suppressed in the planning stages by Harry Dee, director of secondary education for the school district.

Mr. Dee denied the report Wednesday. He said informal talks have been held with students but added:

"We've never even discussed it at the decision-making level."

Trustee Leslie Karagianis, spokesman for the board, and district superintendent John Gough both said they were unaware of the issue.

Among the university delegation will be Paul Williamson, president of the student council. He said Wednesday that high school students had appealed to university students for help in publishing a paper.

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

November may well be the month of leaden skies and falling leaves but in Victoria it has a much brighter side.

This is the month when debutantes are busy preparing to make their debut before the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Pearkes at the United Services Ball a week Friday at the Empress Hotel.

There are so many things to do before the ball. Dresses are just a small part of the whole picture even if they are very important.

This coming Monday evening there will be a full rehearsal in the ballroom at the Empress when the deb's will go through the paces exactly as they will on the evening of the 15th. Escorts will be there with them promptly at 7:30 p.m. Mrs. R. D. Travis who has been taking debutantes through their prep ball rehearsals for many years will be there to give last minute advice.

Down at the hotel on Tuesday evening the girls had their pictures taken for the week-end paper. I asked if they were getting excited and the answer was unanimous. "No, not excited but nervous, yes."

Pip Holmes, proud father of debutante daughter, Diana, was providing competition to Colonel photographer, Bud Kinsman. Successfully, we hope.

After the rehearsal on Monday evening, Major and Mrs. Keith MacDougall will give a buffet supper party for the deb's and their escorts. Their daughter, Miss Josephine MacDougall and her escort, Bob Henderson, will be helping them at the party.

Another party will be held on Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis E. Harris, parents of debutante Pamela Harris. There will be dancing and later supper at this pre ball party.

Mr. Robert Bonner and Mrs. Sam Lane, mothers of debutantes, Barbara Bonner and Dorothy Lane, are having a tea for the girls on Sunday afternoon at the Olde England Inn.

16th Birthday Party

Not quite in the debutante picture but getting awfully close was the party that Mr. and Mrs. Eric Leavoy gave for daughter, Erica on her 16th birthday.

The party, a real bang up affair complete with an orchestra, was held at the home of Erica's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Paddy Walton.

Erica tells me her party was a real riot (her words) and that everyone is still talking about what a good time they had. Erica had a lovely new melon colored dress for her party.

Young friends helping her to celebrate this important date were Laurie Fee, Cathy Lawson, Karen Alton, Linda Carlson, Marilyn Quinn, Lesley, Ginny Rixton, Ruth Broadfoot, Elizabeth Tanner, Kim Mills, Mary Ellis, Judy Poole, Ilse Sartorius, Debbie Todd and sister, Grania Leavoy.

Junior League Patrons

University of Victoria president, Dr. Malcolm G. Taylor, and Mrs. Taylor are patrons of the annual Junior League of Vancouver cabaret two-night show this year. The Taylors will be going over for the first night on the 19th. The theme is "0065" and will be held in the Commodore.

Pre-Wedding Parties

Gail Beckie, a member of two pioneer families of Victoria (her grandfather was the late Stephen Jones) is being entertained at a number of parties before her wedding to Mr. Gary Johnston.

The 16th Scottish Band (the groom is a band member) will be in attendance at the wedding which will take place at St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church on the 20th of this month.

Mothers of the principals, Mrs. Harry Beckie Jr. and Mrs. Robert Johnston did the honors at the tea table when Mrs. Maurice Charnell gave a miscellaneous shower for the bride-to-be.

Mrs. David Schultz also gave a miscellaneous shower for Miss Beckie and last Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Dodge were hosts for both groom elect and his fiancée. There were about 20 couples who brought grocery gifts, recipes, ingredients and pots and pans to cook them in. Later there was a buffet supper.

Champagne Luncheon

Linda Gibson, another bride-to-be of the 20th has also been feted at several parties. Mrs. Adrian Greenbank gave a champagne luncheon for her at the Oak Bay Marina when guests were Mrs. David Deno, Mrs. Frank Gibson, Mrs. Ted Greenbank and Mrs. P. Huns.

We all feel that boys are becoming too feminine. A boy who would streak his hair is repugnant, abhorrent, insufferable, repulsive, nauseating, loathsome, some, offensive, disgusting and icky.

How can males expect females to respect them if they get themselves up to look like women? Don't they realize their greatest attraction is that they are the opposite sex? You have my permission to print my letter and I hope you do. —THUMBS DOWN ON BLEACHED BLONDE BOYS.

Dear Thumbs: Thanks for your views. And now I'd like to remind you girls that your greatest attraction is that you are members of the opposite sex.

Girls who get themselves up to look like boys are repugnant, abhorrent, insufferable, repulsive, nauseating, loathsome, offensive, disgusting and icky.

Dear Ann Landers: For the past three days I've received a telephone call between 11 a.m. and 11:15 a.m. A cultured voice says, "I think you should know your husband is having an affair with his office manager." Then I hear a click and the party leaves the line.

I've never had cause to suspect my husband of stepping out on me. He comes straight home from work and rarely goes anywhere without me. His office manager is a divorced woman who is raising three children. She is dignified and reserved and has worked for my husband for five years.

I know I should put these calls out of my mind but I can't. I haven't told my husband because it might upset him. The phone company says they can't trace a call unless the party stays on the line for 20 minutes. I need some guidance.—UNNERVED.

Dear Unnerved: Tell your husband some nut has been calling you with a wild story about him and his office manager and you think he should be aware of it. Then get an unlisted phone number.

German Women Playing New Role in Society

Rapid change in the position of women in Germany since the war was described by Mrs. Rose Jaeger in her talk to members of the Women's Canadian Club Wednesday afternoon.

Re-education of older women, with emphasis on evening courses to assist women with families to brush up or finish university training, is one of the many new indications of their changing role.

The change is particularly pronounced since pre-war years with Hitler's decree of "Church, Children and Kitchen" for all women.

Mrs. Jaeger, who is the wife of the former vice-president of the German Parliament, has been on a speaking tour of Canada.

She outlined the history of the German Women's Movement, pointing out that women in Germany have been slower to take their place in society than others in the West.

"But after the war, following 12 years of dictatorship, the civil law was changed to give women full equality with men, in any walk of life."

"The long struggle began in 1848, when working conditions for women were appalling, and they were not even allowed to dispose of the little money they earned."

In 1865 the German Women's Union was founded, six years before the German state came into existence. Their aims were to help the working women, and to get better education for the girls.

"It was a British princess, Queen Victoria's daughter, who understood and assisted the founder of the movement," Mrs. Jaeger pointed out.

"Now, finally, we are getting more women in all professions. Fifteen per cent of our doctors are women, and we now have our first women judges who are doing a very good job."

Although women are taking an increased interest in politics, and in fact it was the women's vote that decided all the recent elections, Mrs. Jaeger said that German women are still rather afraid of speaking in public as women do in this country.

"When I return to Germany, I shall be telling about Canadian women. It is so much easier for women to understand each other, for we have the same problems all over the world. Our interests are the same: We want freedom and peace to bring up our families, and that is why we could do a good job working for peace."

Miss Elizabeth Forbes introduced the speaker, who was thanked by Mrs. F. M. Corbett. Following the meeting, Mrs. Jaeger was honored at tea, at which guests were Miss Forbes, Mrs. Leslie Macdonell, Mrs. W. Groener, Mrs. Fred M. Corbett, Mrs. H. H. Youson, Mrs. R. T. Wallace, Mrs. J. H. Brown, Mrs. Frank Mack, Mrs. A. B. Young, Mrs. T. C. Evans, Mrs. Dai MacLeod, Mrs. C. L. Smith, Mrs. A. Stringer, Mrs. A. T. C. Cowley, Miss Mary Ashworth.

Disabled loaded aboard hospital evacuation train

Invalids Evacuated From Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)—Invalids and elderly persons Wednesday began boarding the first of two evacuation trains scheduled to leave the city in preparation for Friday's lifting of the chlorine barge sunk in the Mississippi River by Hurricane Betsy.

The train left late for the central Louisiana hospital at Pineville. A second hospital train will be loaded today.

The danger area is a five-mile arc around the barge.

NEAR CAMPUS

The barge rests about a mile and a half from the Louisiana State University campus.

The barge contains 600 tons of liquid chlorine. The danger from the chlorine would come if any of the tanks should rupture during the lift. The chlorine would then be released under pressure as deadly chlorine gas. Officials have stressed there is scant possibility of this.

COUNTDOWN

But elaborate emergency procedures have been made under "operation Safeguard," a combined operation of national guard troops, state and local police officers.

The 48-hour countdown to the time of the barge lift began this morning and one of the first steps is voluntary evacuation of elderly persons from the danger area who have requested it.

CLASSES SUSPENDED

There are no plans for compulsory evacuation although residents of the area have been asked to leave by their own means on Friday.

There will be no public schools open that day. LSU has suspended classes. Private businesses, banks and post offices will close. So will state and municipal offices.

SIRENS

In Baton Rouge proper, emergency vehicles will be placed at predetermined locations to evacuate anyone remaining in the area should an emergency arise.

A total of 125 army trucks will

U.S., Canada Wary About Grid

By ARCH MACKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The searching questions about a national power grid and developing Canadian links into a continental system seem bound to arise from Tuesday's great blackout.

Both pros and cons exist.

PLANS PROCEEDING

Planning for expanded power connections has been proceeding in each country. Preliminary Canada-U.S. discussions about the continental approach have been desultory, perhaps because of Canada's appraisal of its water resources which is an integral phase of any such study.

At its simplest, a power grid enables connected electrical systems to help each other out daily, seasonally or in emergencies such as the vast failure Tuesday evening which directly touched more than 30,000,000 people in Ontario and adjacent northern states.

SHORTCOMINGS

Just why the failure occurred will shed light on the inability of the whole electrical complex to bear up. The fact it did not—and the fact that the electrical "backfire" actually spread because of the grid rather than in spite of it—indicate technological shortcomings somewhere that must be solved.

What happened could be used as an argument against extensive grids, leaving connections loose enough to enable single systems such as Ontario Hydro to cut out in time to prevent being dragged into massive failures.

MILITARY ATTACK

It also raises the question of the effectiveness of a grid under attack by nuclear or other military means.

Canada-U.S. links are extensive, depending on region, as indicated by Ontario's problems Tuesday night in a power failure apparently in the U.S.

British Columbia is tied into the Pacific Northwest and will be more firmly linked on completion of the high voltage power line designed to tap the Columbia River developments.

Last Dec. 13, the Federal Power Commission here issued a comprehensive report called "Guidelines for Growth of the Electric Power Industry. It urged greater co-ordination among the 3,600 separate American systems large and small—with the giants all in private hands.

It also urged closer ties with Canada, citing existing links with Ontario Hydro as a measure of the benefits to be obtained both ways.

The FPC report estimated that Canada might have further export capacity of about 7,000,000 kilowatts from the Peace and Columbia rivers, the Nelson and Hamilton falls in Labrador.

The logic behind the FPC stress on greater collaboration is that transfers of power via a grid enable individual members to avoid costly emergency generating facilities which otherwise operate only at periods of peak or emergency demand.

The report said:

The predominance of publicly-owned power in Canada facilitates such planning while the U.S. faces opposition at times between the public and private sectors.

An Uncertain Voice in Elections

By FRASER MacDOUGALL

OTTAWA (CP) — More often than not, Canadians have spoken with an uncertain voice in federal elections over the last 45 years.

The uncertainty began in 1921, the year the so-called agrarian revolt in Ontario and the Prairies found expression in federal political action.

NO CONNECTION?

There may be no connection with the country's seeming inability to make up its mind, but that was also the year women got the vote. The 1921 election was the first with universal suffrage for all Canadians at 21.

In 13 elections before 1921, the two-party system had a firm hold and Canadians returned a majority of Conservatives or Liberals. Each time, the winners captured more than half the party vote.

But in 14 elections starting in 1921, the winning party has taken

Canadian Record Shaky Since Women Got Vote

ken a majority of House seats into the 1921 federal election on Dec. 6 with eagerness.

Running under the Progressive banner, they captured 65 of 235 Commons seats—24 of 82 in Ontario, 12 of 15 in Manitoba, 15 of 16 in Saskatchewan and 10 of 12 in Alberta. They also picked up one of New Brunswick's 11 seats and three of B.C.'s 13.

LABOR WON SEATS Labor, ranked by some students as the urban counterpart of the agrarian revolt, won another three seats. One of its successful candidates was J. S. Woodsworth, founder of the CCF. Its descendant, the NDP, was the strongest third force on last Monday's vote.

The Liberals had the largest group in 1921 and formed a government with 117 seats. They polled only 42.7 per cent of the party vote. The Conservatives, who won 50 seats, polled 32 per cent. Progressives, labor and others received 25.3 per cent.

Indecision reigned again in 1925. The Conservatives got the biggest share of the party vote, 46.4 per cent, and elected most members, 116 for a 245-seat House. But the Liberals, with 101 members and 40.2 per cent of the vote, stayed in office for eight months with the help of 24 Progressives and four others elected on 13.4 per cent of the vote.

In 1926, straight Liberal candidates took 43.8 per cent of the vote and 118 were elected. They governed four years in the 245-seat House with the 30 Liberal Progressives, who basically were Liberals. The Conservatives got the biggest share of the vote, 47.5 per cent, but elected only 91 members. Liberal Commons majority.

Progressives, Progressives, United Farmers of Alberta and others had 36 members elected on 10.9 per cent of the vote. The 1945 election returned only 118 Liberals in a 245-seat House, but enough MPs elected as Independent - Liberal joined the party caucus to provide a Commons majority.

“When the saleslady held up Cameo "Little Nothing" in new Cantreace nylon, I almost laughed. What a funny, crinkly stocking. But when I stretched it on, "Little Nothing" was suddenly made-to-measure. Not a wrinkle or sag. Just fit, fit, fit, with no let-down. (And me, the original baggy-stocking girl.) Soft matte finish. And sheer like crazy. Now I have a complete "Little Nothing" wardrobe. Plainstitch. Mesh. And a wicked nude heel. (The baggy-stocking girl is gone for good.)

Honestly, Cameo, where have you been all my life?

Store Explosion

KELOWNA (CP) — Firemen and gas inspectors were investigating a mysterious explosion that rocked a supermarket Wednesday and sent five men to hospital. The blast in a furnace and storage room caused damage of $40,000.

It lifted the roof of the building, shattered plate glass windows and shook buildings four blocks away.

The explosion at 4 a.m. was followed by a fire. Seven men were in the store at the time, attempting to determine the cause of a smaller explosion 15 minutes earlier.

Store manager Wally Payne was knocked unconscious and severely burned. In satisfactory condition are constable Keith Westwood and clerk James Edward Batten. Both suffered burns. Treated for burns were firemen Sam Close and Brian Tully.

RCMP Tells of Liquor at Crash Scene

Two witnesses testified in central magistrate's court Wednesday to seeing a young man pour the contents of a bottle on to the road following a collision.

Sept. 18.

David Tribe, a student at Simon Fraser University, pleaded not guilty to impaired driving.

John Fuller and Angus Robson, a staff sergeant with the RCMP, both testified to seeing Tribe pour liquid from a bottle.

RYE ON GRASS

Mr. Fuller couldn't identify the liquid but said it had the smell of alcohol.

Staff-Sgt. Robson said it was a bottle of rye.

He also said that he later saw the defendant pouring the contents of another bottle onto a nearby lawn.

KICK IT BACK

Mr. Fuller said he also saw a young man in the crowd kicking a bottle out of some bushes and the defendant trying to kick it back.

Staff-Sgt. Robson said he was driving east on Cedar Hill Cross Road near Blenkinsop about midnight, Sept. 18.

"A car drove over to my side of the street and it appeared as if I was going to have a head-on collision," he said.

CAR VEERED

He veered to the right and the oncoming car also turned to the right, court was told.

"We sideswiped each other," Staff-Sgt. Robson said.

In later testimony, he said: "In my opinion the accused was intoxicated."

AFTER POURING

Defence counsel Brian Smith asked him if he reached this opinion after seeing the defendant pour the liquor.

"No, it was before," he replied.

The case was adjourned until Monday.

A leaking radiator led police to Ronald Aitken, Prosecutor Peter Birkett said.

Aitken, 770 Store Street, Lake Cowichan, pleaded guilty to impaired driving and to failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Mr. Birkett said that Aitken hit a car parked on Gorge at 8:40 p.m. Tuesday. His car then smashed into another parked car and Aitken then carried on, court was told.

WATER TRAIL

For 10 blocks police trailed the water that was leading from Aitken's radiator before apprehending him.

A breathalyzer recording of 18 was taken.

Aitken acknowledged a conviction in 1961 for impaired driving but Magistrate J. A. Byers declined to pass sentence until the crown produced a copy of the conviction.

Aitken was remanded to Friday.

A 17-year-old youth used his mother's bank account to buy a car. John Murphy, 313 Obed, pleaded guilty to uttering and was remanded to Nov. 18 for pre-sentence report.

Det. George Walton said Murphy bought a car Nov. 5 for $800 and presented a cheque from his mother's account.

Det. Walton said Murphy told him he wanted a car so he wrote a cheque. He admitted writing similar cheques before.

A second man was sentenced to six months in jail following theft of about a ton of copper from Northern Junk Ltd., Esquimalt Road, between Sept. 15 and Oct. 28.

Magistrate Byers Wednesday sentenced Sidney Fry after hearing that Allan Pratt, 414 Heather, had been given six months in jail by Magistrate William Ostler Monday.

Det. Edward Hardy said the pair and a third who had not yet been apprehended, had received about $300 for the copper.

The temptation of a radio hanging by one screw in a damaged car was too much for Gerald Woloshyn, 19, of 220 Kamloops.

Woloshyn pleaded guilty to theft above $50 and was remanded to Nov. 18 for a pre-sentence report.

Det. Norman Baker said the defendant took the radio from the car parked on Douglas Street Nov. 5.

He said Woloshyn said he didn't know why he took it.

Store detective Margaret Campbell told the court how she saw Robert Montgomery slip some bits into his pocket and then leave Woodward's Oct. 30 without paying for them.

She said Montgomery, 4957

Cadboro, also selected a box of tools which he paid for.

Mrs. Campbell said Montgomery at first denied knowledge of the bits and then handed her his credit card.

However, Montgomery was taken to the Woodward's office and some more bits were found. The bits were worth $73.95, Mrs. Campbell said.

Montgomery pleaded guilty and was remanded to Wednesday for a pre-sentence report.

A chance meeting in Government Street at 8:45 p.m. Nov. 3 ended in court for all three participants.

Naval ratings Gordon Kuhn and John Johnson were fined $35 each for being minors in possession and John Carlos, 625 Johnson, was fined $50 or 30 days for supplying liquor to minors.

The ratings said they asked Carlos to buy some wine for them. Carlos admitted buying the liquor but said he was drunk at the time.

Douglas Dewdney, 4331 Glenford, had a bottle of wine in his possession when approached by police on top of Mt. Douglas at 2 a.m., Oct. 16.

He pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession and was fined $35.

Richard Hardgrove spent the last few nights sleeping in a disused horse trailer. For the next month, he will sleep in jail.

Magistrate J. A. Byers sentenced him to 30 days in jail after Hardgrove pleaded guilty to vagrancy.

Constable Ronald Ferguson said he found Hardgrove asleep in the trailer early Wednesday morning.

He said Hardgrove told him he had no money and had last worked about a year ago.

A woman admitted firing a shot from a .303 rifle into the darkness at View Royal Oct. 27.

Diana Kennedy, 13 Camden, was remanded to Nov. 18 for a pre-sentence report.

Mr. Birkett said she discharged the rifle out a back window toward a populated area. There were no reports of the shot hitting anything.

Accused Tells Court — 'I Was in Seattle'

One of three men accused of a raid which netted a safe from a city pharmacy claimed he was in Seattle at the time, an assize jury heard in Victoria, Wednesday.

But Const. Peter Voth identified the man, Russell Bowcott, as driver of the station wagon in which the stolen safe was found.

Bowcott, Sidney Travers and Gerald Brune all pleaded not guilty to breaking and entering the Fairfield Pharmacy, 301 Cook, on or about July 5, and stealing the safe.

SAFE CONTENTS

Contents of the safe were said to include $345 and a quantity of narcotics.

Const. Voth said he spotted the station wagon travelling north on Cook in the early morning of July 5 and followed it. Doing so, he recognized one of the vehicle's three occupants, though he did not recall until later the man's name was Travers, he said.

WARNING TICKET

The station wagon turned into Princess then pulled into the curb, the constable continued. Travers got out and disappeared into the darkness.

The officer said he approached Bowcott, the driver, and asked him for his driver's licence. He told the driver he did not have his rear licence plate illuminated, and issued him with a warning ticket.

Const. Voth stated he looked into the back of a station wagon and saw at the extreme rear a large square object covered by a canvas.

Bowcott informed him, "You will have to get a search warrant before you take all the stuff out of my car," the constable testified.

SS DEBT

He said Bowcott also made off before other police officers could get to the scene. The third man, Brune, remained, claiming he was collecting a $35 debt from a Duggie White, who lived on Princess and two "friends" had driven him there, he said. Later, at police headquarters, he heard Brune name the "friends" as Bowcott and Travers.

IN SEATTLE

Const. Voth added that six days later, the men were handed over to the city police by Vancouver authorities. "I was in Seattle," said Bowcott.

When Brune was charged with breaking and entering, he replied, "I don't know what to do. If you find the other two, they will clear this all up."

TOOLS IN CAR

The officer said Brune again indicated the men he referred to were Bowcott and Travers.

According to evidence, a claw hammer, flashlight and gloves were also discovered in the station wagon.

Const. Voth agreed with Alan Bigelow, representing Brune, that the hammer could be classified as "building material."

TRIAL CONTINUES

Dermot Owen-Flood appears for the other two men and Louis Lindholm and Roger Walker are Crown counsel.

The trial continues Friday with the probability the jury will not receive the charge until Saturday.

Salvia Anchored

I had never before heard of salvia being grown as a houseplant. But I can see that it would have considerable charm when grown by itself in a pot instead of being viewed in the mass in outdoor beds. Seeds are listed in almost every seed catalogue for as little as 15¢ per packet, and there isn't any trick at all in growing them. Simply sow thinly and shallowly in a pot of sandy loam soil and keep warm and just barely moist. When the baby plants come up, grow them in sunny windows of a cool room, transplanting to individual pots as soon as the seedlings are big enough to handle.

Actors! When Marlon Brando's agent asked him, "would you go to London to be interviewed by Charlie Chaplin for his next picture?" Marlon was on the next plane, didn't bother to register at a hotel and went straight to see Chaplin. When the latter said, "Thank you for coming," Brando replied, "Thank you. It's a great privilege to meet the greatest actor in the world." And yet, when it came to the question of billing, Marlon was ready to walk out, if Sophia Loren was billed above him. Actors.

What do Rex Harrison and Frank Sinatra have in common? They both dislike discussing their private lives, that's what. Rex is currently being sued by a writer who was planning a big story on him titled The Women In My Life. Rex balked at the starting post after, according to the scribe, giving him the go-ahead. I wasn't too surprised when Sinatra tried to stop the TV special on his life. What amazed me was that he agreed to do it in the first place.

The salesman obligingly pulls out a long, flat box. On the top is one word "Destroy".

"See, sir, the pieces are these bomb-bearing missiles, which can be launched from the next room. The board is a model city, with schools and hospitals clearly marked. The object is to . . . no?"

"Well, then, how about this new war doll, U.S. Sam? You wind it up and it goes to a foreign country and gets killed. Comes completely back alive. Comes with a disintegration dial, and a supply of letters to the folks back home. . . ."

"Or there's the Air Force apy model, the U-2 Brutus. Flies over the neighbor's house and . . ."

Noticing that his son is the more studious type, the shaken citizen mounts the slide-walk and heads for the girls' department. In the distance he can still hear the salesman.

"Intellectual type, sir? Then how about a good book? Got a fine deal on a year's subscription to Marquês de Sade Monthly."

"Ah! Marquês de Sade Monthly?"

"Christmas present for the little girl, eh? How about Nurse Nell Kitt? Genuine Swedish steel scalpel, and when you cut the little toy patient, it screams."

"Well, I was going to look at . . ."

"No!" the citizen explains. "They're always nice, and you seem to have quite a selection."

"Indeed we have sir," the burbies enthusiastically. "Take our new model, for instance. It's called Paula Protest. It doesn't scream, but it has lines around blocking the entrance to the wa-toy box.

"But most people prefer the life-size, walking, talking, crying, sneezing and laughing models. They're right over here. Fortunately it's Saturday, or they'd all be in school. See, you just push this button right here, and . . .

Snap!

"Oh, I beg your pardon, madame! You were standing so still there I thought it was a moment that . . . well, it was a natural mistake."

Sensing that his customer is about to slip away, the salesman pulls him to another counter and two huge dolls. Beaming with justifiable pride, he makes the introductions:

"Here, sir, our Rubik's Cubes, the Victor and Nabster Nelsens, no realists; they have to be packaged separately. The whole family will love them."

"In fact," he whispers confidentially, "some parents have even brought in their own children as trade-ins."

Now by the citizen is reeling numbed by the almost hypnotic persuasiveness of the salesman's voice. Behind his hands are his charge-plates. But as the salesman reaches to take it, strength thing happens.

His voice loses its beautiful tone and begins to crack. His eyes flick open and shut, his mouth becomes jerky. With obvious effort, he makes one last push:

"Sorry, sir. Circuit breakdown. Another clerk will help you. Let . . . me . . . assure you, this . . . doesn't . . . happen . . . often . . . but . . . our other dolls . . . our salesmen are usually quite reliable . . . reliable . . . reliable . . ."

Reds Turn Backs on Disaster

Island Editor

With a shoulder shrug the crew of a Russian tug sailed away from a holed Canadian fishing boat, leaving three Canadians abandoned on the sinking craft.

One man died, two suffered shock and exposure, and their craft the Aleutian Queen sank Wednesday, but according to the survivors the Russians wouldn't lift a finger to help. They even sailed away with the Aleutian Queen's stabilizer, said the survivors.

The collision occurred at 7:40 Wednesday morning, when the Russian tug, pulling a trawl, smashed into the back of the Aleutian Queen.

The action occurred in pre-dawn light, 21 miles west of Mexicana Point on Hope Island off the northern tip of Vancouver Island. This would place the accident outside the presently-accepted 12-mile limit, around Vancouver Island.

But fishermen and chambers of commerce on the Island are pushing for a baseline to be established from Triangle Island north to the Queen Charlottes, and the accident occurred well within this limit. The Russian vessel smashed into the back of the Aleutian Queen.

The three men on the Canadian vessel ran to the back, and saw their craft was taking water. They also noticed the boat's stabilizer, about 30 feet long and made from pipe, had fallen onto the Russian vessel. The men aboard were Olsten Hansen, 53, and his son Robert, 21, both of Vancouver, and cook Oud Gronlund of North Surrey.

Rhodesia Act Is Imminent

LONDON (UPI)—Rhodesia may declare Unilateral Independence from Britain within 24 hours, unofficial government sources predict.

They said an unexpected exchange of messages between Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith and Queen Elizabeth, coupled with troop movements in Rhodesia and the deadlocked independence talks, seemed to indicate a declaration of independence was imminent.

If the white-ruled African colony does seize its freedom from Britain, it will be the first to do so since the American colonies did it in 1776.

In his message to the Queen, Smith said Britain and Rhodesia found it "impossible to agree on the course of government which may be best for all the peoples of Rhodesia."

"It will be to our lasting sorrow should we find ourselves excluded from the Commonwealth, but nothing can break the ties of common heritage and kinship which we share with so many of its older members," the letter said.

The letter was signed by Smith and 15 other ministers. The Queen's reply said she hoped the Rhodesians would demonstrate their loyalty "by continuing to act in a constitutional manner."

Troops On Move

Sources said this underlined Prime Minister Harold Wilson's frequently-stated warning that only the British Parliament can legally grant Rhodesia its independence.

In Rhodesia a government spokesman confirmed that troop movements were under way in the country. He denied, however, that the exercises were anything other than "purely routine."

State of emergency regulations currently in force precluded his elaborating, the spokesman said.

Earlier Wednesday Rhodesian Chief Justice Sir Hugh Beadle, who came here contrary to Smith's wishes in response to an invitation from Prime Minister Harold Wilson, left by plane for home. He declined comment.

Beadle spent 24 hours in Britain in the hope of establishing a new line of communication between the two governments.

Whitehall sources said Wilson sent an oral message to Smith early Wednesday through British High Commissioner Jack Johnston.

There was no official indication of the contents of the message, but it was understood Wilson sought Smith's go-ahead for the proposed royal commission to be set up to start polling black and white Rhodesian opinion on Rhodesia's terms for independence.

In Salisbury Johnston confirmed he had delivered "a confidential message" to Smith during a 50-minute meeting with the premier.

Yes-It Could Happen Again

Blackout Still Dark Mystery

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Government investigators moved swiftly to determine whether "someone pulled the wrong switch" or a mechanical mishap caused the massive power breakdown that plunged millions of northeasterners into a nightmare of darkness.

Chairman Joseph Swidler of the Federal Power Commission, under orders from President Johnson to come up with some answers, launched the investigation. Congressional probes also were planned.

"When you look at the possibilities, one of them was that a piece of equipment broke down. Another possibility is that it wasn't operated right, conceivably, someone pulled the wrong switch," Swidler said. (See also Pages 23, 25.)

START PINPOINTING
The federal investigation would start with pinpointing the cause of the blackout and end with recommendations that would prevent a similar disaster.

Residents of an 80,000 square mile area experienced the extraordinary night without electricity, beginning shortly after 5 p.m. EST Tuesday. Hit by the power failure were parts of New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Vermont, Pennsylvania long with parts of Ontario.

Aiding Swidler in the search are the FBI, the defence department, the justice department and other agencies.

However, Swidler said "We may never trace where it started." But he hoped to have a preliminary report offering at least some clues ready for the president by the end of the week.

WATER OVER DAM
"Whatever happened is water over the dam," he told newsmen after the meeting. "It is useful only as it guides us for the future. What this demonstrates is the need for ever greater care, for ever greater reliability and sophistication of equipment for enlargement of reserves not only in generating equipment but also for design of equipment for overload and emergency equipment."

So far, he said there was no evidence that the failure was the result of a deliberate act. "There always was the possibility of a similar blackout in the future," he said.

Human Torch
Dying Wish:
To Survive

NEW YORK (UPI)—A 22-year-old pacifist who turned himself into a human torch in front of the United Nations building as a protest against "War, all war," died Wednesday in Bellevue Hospital.

Roger Laporte, a former Roman Catholic seminarian, drenched himself with gasoline and went up in a sheet of flame.

Only a few hours before his death, he sent a message to his friends which said: "I want to live."

Heart Troubles

Ike Gets Oxygen Pains Now Severe

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI)—Former president Dwight D. Eisenhower Wednesday suffered a sharp return of the chest pains earlier diagnosed as angina pectoris and was returned to an oxygen tent.

Doctors said the pains were now "of longer duration" than the ones the 73-year-old general suffered when he was hospitalized Tuesday. Plans to fly him to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington were suspended.

The former president's doctors refused a direct answer to questions of whether the recurrence was more serious than the earlier pains.

Eisenhower's specialist, Dr. Thomas Mattingly, sent word only that the pains were "more prolonged and of longer duration" than the first time. They are the same type of angina pectoris suffered Tuesday, he said.

John Eisenhower, the former president's son, walked out of the Eisenhower suite shortly after newsmen were given the announcement.

After Fishboat Tragedy

NAVY HUNTS SOVIET BOSS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The flagship of a Soviet fishing fleet headed Wednesday night toward the spot where a Canadian trawler sank with the loss of one man after colliding with a Russian vessel.

The fisheries department patrol vessel Laurier was already at the scene, off the northern tip of Vancouver Island, but a department spokesman in Vancouver said the Laurier was unable to communicate with the Russians because of language problems.

The Royal Canadian Navy had ordered the ocean escort HMCS Stettler to locate the Soviet fleet commander and ask him to go to the area.

The Vancouver-based trawler Aleutian Queen sank earlier Wednesday in Queen Charlotte Sound north of Vancouver Island, three hours after the collision.

RCAR search and rescue headquarters in Vancouver said Cook Oud Gronlund of North Surrey was drowned, Olsten Hansen, owner-skipper of the 64-foot Aleutian Queen, and his son Robert were picked up by the American trawler Western Maid.

A spokesman for the department of fisheries said he believed a Russian deep-sea tug, the Beastrashny J, was towing a trawl at the time of the collision.

There was doubt as to whether the collision occurred within the 12-mile fishing limit set by Canada.

This Must Stop!

Fishermen Boiling With Rage

This must stop. Now!

Rage and indignation are boiling through the ranks of B.C. coast fishermen, following the ramming of a Canadian vessel by a Russian tug, resulting in the death of one man, Wednesday.

Smith

And the manoeuvres of the Russian ships, endangering the lives of Canadian and American fishermen, have also incensed the fishing industry.

BUT HOW?
How can it be stopped? Move the Russians out of Hecate Strait, say fishermen from Campbell River to Victoria.

GENERAL FEELING
This was the general feeling among fishermen interviewed at Fishermen's Wharf in Victoria Tuesday.

"It seems like an awful thing to happen but I think this will bring some action," said veteran dragger fisherman Herb Smith of Victoria, skipper of the Elwin S.

"GUTS NEEDED"
"Maybe now they'll have the guts to do something. If a little country like Peru can set a 200 mile limit and patrol it with gunboats I don't see why we can't do something," he said.

"If you cross Peru's fishing boundary you get shot at."

"MOVE THEM OUT"
Mr. Smith will be heading for northern waters in the spring.

"But I don't suppose it will do any good. I don't imagine there'll be any fish left."

Sonny Ross, chairman of Campbell River Chamber of Commerce fishing committee and a trawler skipper, said the Russian fleet should be moved out of the area immediately.

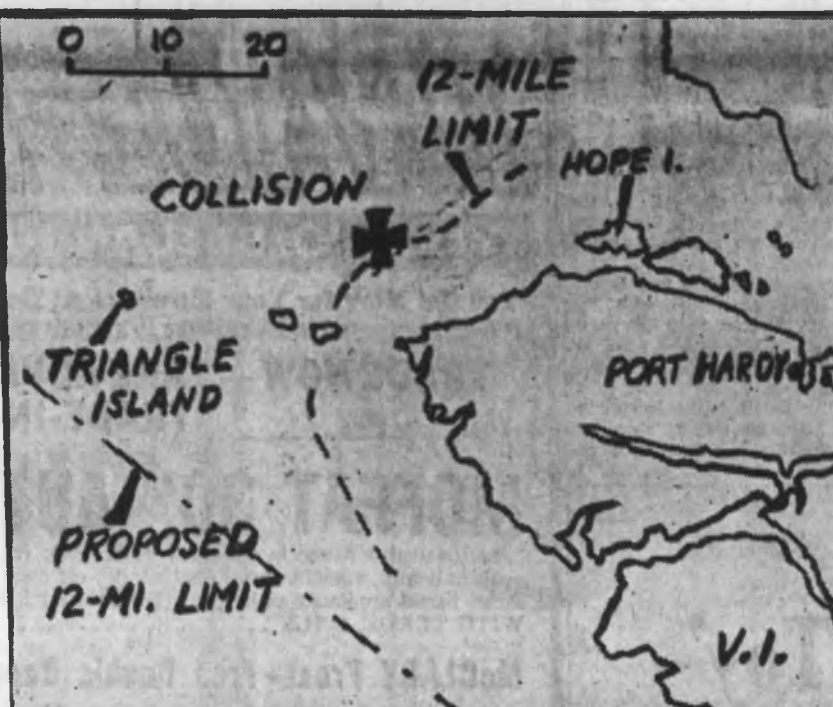

"HISTORIC RIGHT"
"If we don't get them out fast, they will establish a historic right, and we will never get them out," he said.

In Nanaimo, Bill MacDonald of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, said "we have been calling for an international fishing line, but we've had no success with the last two governments."

He said the sinking of a Canadian vessel was the last two governments.

mission list of 19 questions attempting to pinpoint the triggering cause. One question: "What happened first?"

Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate commerce committee, and his House counterpart, Rep. Walter Rogers, D-Tex., plan congressional investigations of the power failure.

"We must be certain that it does not occur again," Magnuson said.

IMPOSSIBLE TO TELL

Swidler said it was impossible to tell if human or mechanical error triggered the failure.

"Like all historic inquiries, we may never quite agree on precisely what happened. We have heard a number of explanations already, not entirely consistent. Because the fault might have been human error, we may never trace where it started."

"But, we are going to do our best," he said.

ABLE TO TOLERATE

Swidler said investigators had not determined the time or locality of the first power failure.

An industry participant in the meeting—L. F. Lischer, vice-president of the Commonwealth Edison Co.—said one wrongly-pulled switch would "not normally" be able to produce such widespread damage.

Lischer said that "normally, a system would be able to tolerate" one such mishap, falling back on reserve energy. But "sometimes you get a combination of a sequence of events, automatic and manual."

NO DISCOVERY

The precise location of initial breakdown was a matter of dispute. Harry Slater, vice-president of the Niagara-Mohawk Power Corp., denied a claim by the Office of Emergency Planning that the breakdown had been traced to an electrical switching centre operated by his firm below Niagara Falls.

Slater said here that all Niagara-Mohawk customers were back in service by 9 p.m. EST Tuesday and "we have had no discovery of any fault or break on any of our lines."

Adding to the confusion was what was purported to be the New York State Power Authority's statement that "indications are that the breakdown occurred in the Clay substation of the Niagara-Mohawk Power Corp., located west of Syracuse, N.Y." Minutes later, however, the power authority said the statement on the Clay substation was "unauthorized and unfounded."

Aspirins Can Be Deadly 'Toy'

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Mr. C., in Texas, sends me a clipping about a year-old child who choked to death on an aspirin tablet. And she is correct in recognizing this as a danger, but she then jumps to some conclusions that don't fit. She writes:

"More than 1,000 children died in 1964 from taking aspirin tablets, which used to be hard and were easily swallowed. More recently in an advertisement a picture shows how tablets now disintegrate the minute they reached the throat."

I'm afraid Mr. C. is adding 2 and 2 and getting 22. Just the same she raises some important points.

Yes, hundreds of children die from aspirin—but not from taking just one tablet. In their innocence, they eat a whole handful or a bottleful. In such relatively huge quantities aspirin (as well as a lot of other things) becomes a poison. Statistically, aspirin kills or endangers more small children than any other single poison.

Why? Several reasons. Almost everybody keeps aspirin in the house. Used properly, it is one of the safest medicines known. It doesn't burn like acid, or smell or taste offensive like many common poisons found in the home.

But dosage is based on size. One tablet, for a 15-pound baby, is as powerful as 10 tablets for a 150-pound adult. A handful of tablets is the equivalent of 10 handfuls for an adult, a massive and too often a lethal dose.

To save lives of children we have to keep aspirin and every other medicine locked up out of reach. Such things as simple iron compounds for anemia can be deadly, too, but they aren't found in as many households.

As to strangling on a tablet, yet, it can happen, but it isn't because the tablet disintegrates too quickly. The opposite is the case. Any small, solid object, if a child gets it in the windpipe, can be deadly.

For safety, don't let a small child have anything hard, and of a size that can get into the windpipe. I've warned from time to time against letting the little ones get hold of peanuts, popcorn or chewing gum. The same goes for anything of similar size, whether candy, peas, beans, buttons, beads, or pills, including aspirin tablets.

If aspirin needs to be given to a baby, the safer way is not in tablet form at all. Crush the tablet for more usually just part of a tablet) and mix it into a spoonful of milk.

Dear Dr. Molner: Some time ago my friend had her tubes tied, but someone told her she could still have a baby by artificial insemination. I think this is all mixed up.—MRS. P.D.

Yes, it is all mixed up, because artificial insemination cannot possibly be effective after the tubes have been tied.

NOTE TO L.H.: Calcium is not poisonous, and if you take more than you need, the body will excrete any excess.

nothing. They pointed to the stabilizer, he shrugged his shoulders, and the tug moved away.

The Aleutian Queen began its desperate journey toward Bull Harbor on Hope Island.

Two hours later, Captain Charles Loftus aboard the Western Maid out of Seattle, spotted the Aleutian Queen.

He decided to accompany her into port, and told his mate to keep an eye on the Canadian craft.

Several minutes later, the mate came down from the wheelhouse and told Capt. Loftus "I can't see her any more."

Capt. Loftus said "you must be blind, she couldn't have disappeared that fast."

He looked out of the window and saw an object four miles away.

Racing toward the boat, Capt. Loftus made out the bow of the Aleutian Queen sticking above the water, and saw the Hansens getting into a life raft.

The cook, Oud Gronlund, jumped or fell from the bow of the sinking craft, and the Hansens threw him a line and got him on board.

When they threw the life raft off the bow, the cook again jumped in and hung on. But the life raft was upside down, and he was clinging to the bottom.

When the Hansens got to the raft to get in, it had righted itself, and the cook was underwater still clutching the bottom. His other hand was clinging to Olsten Hansen's leg.

Mr. Hansen tried to pull him aboard, but the cook's hand was frozen shut, grasping the bottom of the raft.

When the Western Maid pulled the Hansens and the raft on board, the cook was drowned. "The raft was full of water. If we hadn't been there, it might have gone down," said Capt. Loftus. "By the time we got them aboard, the Aleutian Queen had gone down."

He said the Hansens were completely shaken. "They were shivering with the cold and they were in a state of shock."

The crew of the Western Maid took the men below, took off their clothes and wrapped them in blankets on the bunks.

Mr. Hansen told Capt. Loftus the Russian tug was pulling a "drag," and was apparently fishing the bottom at the time of the crash.

"There was absolutely no reason for the accident," said Capt. Loftus. "At 7:40 a.m. I could see Russian boats all over the place. Visibility was good."

The story he told of fishing in the same area with the Russian ship was a tale of stark terror. Apparently Canadian and American boats are earning their livelihood in constant fear that at any moment they may be run down or smash into a Russian vessel.

The nerves of the North American crewmen are almost shot.

They are calling in panic to each other over the radio, trying to escape the dangerous Russian manoeuvres.

"The Russians just don't seem to give a damn!" said Capt. Loftus.

Two nights before the sinking of the Aleutian Queen, the Western Maid was almost run down by a Russian vessel.

"They came around us on the blind side and cut right across the bow. I thought we were gone for sure!"

"I raced into the wheelhouse and steered hard to starboard. The Russians almost had us."

He said the Russian boats are mostly of the schooner type, and they often leave all deck lights blazing, so that they can hardly see at night.

Capt. Loftus, giving an indication of the type of event that is keeping crewmen awake at night, told the story of the Nina B.

This is an American boat, and Tuesday night she was moving in the darkness.

Her running lights were on, but the man in the wheelhouse relied on other ships also showing a light, to avoid any mishap.

Suddenly, directly in front of the Nina B. lights seemed to blaze out of the sea, blinding him.

A Russian vessel had been lying in the blackness, without a light, and suddenly threw on every light aboard.

"If I'd been going at full speed, I'd have rammed her, we were that close," the skipper of the Nina B. told Capt. Loftus.

Capt. Loftus said "another American boat was towing along, minding its own business, when the Russian ship pulled right in front."

"I heard the skipper shout over the radio, 'Holy cow, what's going on here?'"

The American boat had to pull its gear in fast to avoid the Russian vessel.

Capt. Loftus said both American and Canadian boats have tried to talk to the Russians, to ask them to obey the traditional standards of seamanship.

But he said "Whenever we lay alongside a Russian boat, they just shrug their shoulders and act like they don't understand a thing."

But the North American fishermen have no doubt some of the Russians understand English very well.

"We always signal the other boats over our radio when we find a good area," said Capt. Loftus.

"Whenever we call to the other boats to tell them, the Russian ships are suddenly on the scene."

He said Canadian and American fishermen "go with the depth." That is, they fish north and south, or east and west, all fishing the same way according to the depth.

"But the Russians fish every way, they don't worry about the depth. They just go in all directions."

B.C. Fishermen Boiling with Rage

nadian boat is a matter which should be brought before the Canadian parliament.

Mr. MacDonald said "a person gets so disgusted with a thing like this. They have no mercy on Canadian boats, and they are completely fishing out Hecate Strait."

12-MILE LIMIT

Fishermen want immediate action on the 12-mile limit. It is assumed at present this limit runs around Vancouver Island.

But Triangle Island, part of Canadian territory, is almost 30 miles west of Cape Scott.

BASE LINE

The Campbell River Chamber and other Island groups vitally interested in the fishing trade want the baseline for the limit drawn from Triangle Island to Cape St. James on Queen Charlotte Island.

This would place the whole of Hecate Strait where the Russians are now fishing, out of bounds.

HARD TO BREAK

Mr. Ross said "It is very important to get them out of there immediately. If they develop a historic fishing right, that is a very hard thing to break."

In Victoria: Fisherman J. H. Meredith-Jones said: "This is a hard way to have it happen; it's unfortunate, but maybe it will get them off their backsides."

One method of determining fishing boundaries would be to use the 250-fathom mark of the continental shelf. All waters within this boundary would be Canadian waters.

"The ships would be able to pick up the line on their echo sounders," he said. "We haven't had any big discussions about it but we just don't want these guys fishing like this," he said.

Ronald Pope of Vancouver, who fishes the northern waters every spring, said a baseline should be drawn across Queen Charlotte Sound from headland to headland, and the boundary extended out from this base line.

"If we don't do something about it soon there won't be anything left to fish for," he said.

Mr. Hope's dragger, the Western Maid, has the same name as the ship that rescued two survivors from the Aleutian Queen. He knows Olsten Hansen, 53, and his son, Robert 21, who were rescued.

"They are good men to work with and good fishermen," he said.

Streets Too Dark

Increased Revenues Boost Winter Works

NANAIMO — This city will undertake more winter works projects this season, because of an unexpected increase in the amount of revenue coming to the city. The increase for the year is $42,424.

Ald. Jack Parker said city council has set aside $50,000 towards the city's centennial project, and another $27,000 in a reserve fund for extension of Front Street through CPR property, when negotiations with the company are complete.

Courtenay UGN Picks Up Speed

COURTENAY — After a very shaky start local United Appeal campaign picture has brightened considerably, said Randy Klaver, chairman of the drive.

In a report last week Mr. Klaver said he doubted if $20,000 would be reached, much less the full quota of $31,550.

Tuesday he said the household campaign has gone over the top following the appeal for greater generosity on the part of the participating public.

Logging canvass has also gone over the top in the amount of $8,000. Ten companies have produced 100 per cent records with every employee contributing.

If the public continues to support the campaign in this manner "We are hopeful that the full quota will be met," Mr. Klaver stated.

Nanaimo UA Has Problem

NANAIMO — A week to go and $7,000 to raise. This is the picture of Nanaimo and District United Appeal as 18 groups wait to see if they are going to have sufficient funds for the coming year.

Directors agreed the community must make an extra effort to reach the $67,500 target. At the moment it appears that the appeal will be about $7,000 short.

An urgent appeal is being made by directors to individuals and or business firms who have not been canvassed.

Women of Moose Celebrate Date

DUNCAN — Women of the Moose celebrated their 18th birthday Tuesday and in honour of the occasion 18 members of the Victoria Lodge visited the local lodge.

Taking part in a ritualistic ceremony in ceremonial robes were past deputy grand regent Mrs. May Hamar of Duncan; past deputy grand regent Dolly Guepka of Victoria; and colleague Mrs. Vi Warren of Victoria.

The room was decorated with books and magazines by the library committee, in charge of the evening's program. Library committee chairman Mrs. Mary Lawson, was introduced and the names of her committee members were read out.

A new member, Mrs. Lillian Noren of Duncan, won the Christmas pudding raffle, and Mrs. M. A. Marsh of Victoria won the Christmas cake.

LAKE COWICHAN — Commissioner Herb Halliday requested the installation of a light on South Shore Road at the crosswalk near the bakery, at Tuesday's village council meeting.

He told the council there was no light near the crosswalk, and the area was in darkness, especially if it is raining at night.

TEMPORARY LIGHT

Commissioner Halliday said "I stood near the crosswalk for about 10 minutes one night. I noticed motorists have a great difficulty seeing pedestrians as there is no illumination."

Council will approach B.C. Hydro requesting the installation of a temporary light pending the installation of a permanent fixture next year under the village's street lighting program.

HARD TO SEE

Commissioner B. R. All brought another item to the attention of the council. He said most of the street signs in the village are in need of repainting.

The signs are difficult to read, and some streets are not marked at all.

"I also noticed one street is marked incorrectly, but this may have been the work of Halloween pranksters," he said.

SIGN PAINTING

The repainting and marking of streets was referred to the village's maintenance crew to be carried out "during a future rainy day."

Village clerk W. A. Chappell was appointed returning officer for the civic election, Dec. 11. He was also given permission to appoint deputy returning officers as needed.

POLLING STATION

Nominations for civic positions will be received at the municipal office until noon Nov. 29.

The election polling station will be the municipal hall, Dec. 11. The hall will also be open Dec. 9 from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. for an advance poll for residents who will not be in the area on election day.

Rural Choice

NANAIMO — Chase River Tuesday held its election of rural representatives to the Nanaimo School Board.

Mrs. T. Lang was re-elected and A. Menard filled the other seat.

Book Between Friends

Off to Hawaii with a book of names of her friends in Campbell River is Mrs. Rose McKay, for many years telegrapher in Campbell River. She receives from Dr. N. Bathurst Hall a bound book of names of those who donated for her trip to Hawaii. — (Don Huntley)

PORT ALBERNI — Senior citizens will benefit from a production of Masque Dramatic Society's Aladdin.

The show will be performed by the society Nov. 13 and 15 in Alberni high. In aid of radio station CJAV's Senior Citizen's Fund.

There will be an afternoon matinee Nov. 13 and evening performances Nov. 13 and 15 at 8 p.m.

Over the past 19 years more than $55,000 has been raised for the fund, which is administered jointly by the radio station and the social welfare office.

Gondoliers Set

DUNCAN — Except for two male leads the cast for The Gondoliers to be presented early next year by Duncan Musical Club is complete.

Every Friday at St. Peter's Church Hall, at 8 p.m., rehearsals are taking place, and those interested in the two lead roles are invited to attend. The cast consists of Peter Josselyn, Lewis Langlois, Denny Beaveridge, Norm Bevan, Rita Finch, Louise Sharp, Barbara Desprez, Anne Murray, Polly Elder, Des Gallagher, Frank Weather and Harry Emery.

Moore Will Report On Rate Revision

COURTENAY — Jack Moore, IWA official, will install the executive of Courtenay Local 1-363 Nov. 14.

He will address the meeting on the progress of rate revisions.

The negotiating committee has been meeting for some time discussing revisions in some categories of occupation. Max Salter Courtenay president is a member of the committee.

The installing officer will also report on integration of company employee pension plans and the federal plan.

SOME AGREE

Reports say the federal government has agreed companies may amend pension plans to allow employees to withdraw money at the time the federal plan comes into operation.

Some companies including Crown Zellerbach and McMillan, Bloedel, Powell River Ltd. have already agreed an employee may withdraw money with advance notice being given. It is expected that other companies will follow suit.

EXECUTIVE RETURNED

The 1,000 members of the Courtenay local gave an overwhelming vote of confidence by returning all officers with the exception of the second vice-president who did not run.

Ruddell's Push To Defeat

By MILDRED KURTZ

PARKSVILLE — Lawyer Douglas Ruddell worked hard for the Liberal cause in Comox-Alberni during the election campaign, but his real push for the Grit came after the ballots were counted.

Mr. Ruddell made a bet with businessman Arnie Van Horne that the Liberal candidate would win.

But the NDP took the seat, and Mr. Ruddell paid off Tuesday, to the amusement of on-lookers.

With strong arms and good sportsmanship, Mr. Ruddell ended his campaign efforts with a push.

Public access into logging areas for hunting may be somewhat of a schemozzle this holiday weekend, because of changed work schedules at some operations, but here is how we sort it out at press time.

Nitinat Lake-Nitinat River area will be closed both today and Friday because MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River employees in that Franklin River division work today and are off Friday and B.C. Forest Products employees are off today but work Friday. The company operations overlap in that Nitinat area.

First weekend access to Nitinat area will be 5 p.m. Friday.

The Franklin River to Bamfield area will be closed today and open Friday with access only from the Port Alberni end and not from the Cowichan Lake area.

Cowichan Lake logging areas will be open today as loggers take Remembrance Day off, but will be closed Friday when loggers are back at work.

Nanaimo Lakes is expected to be open today, closed Friday.

Port Renfrew area will be open Thursday, closed Friday. MacPowell operations at Menzies Bay and Kelsey Bay will be closed today, but open Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

All other MacPowell operations, including Northwest Bay, Sprout Lake Division, Copper Canyon and Shawngnan divisions will be open today, closed Friday and open for the weekend, as are all logging claims.

Hunters are not expected to even walk in to the areas while loggers are working.

Sooke area will be open today, Friday, Saturday and Sunday because loggers in that area took their Remembrance Day holiday last Saturday.

Latest report we have from Joe Gregory at Tofino is that the big Canada geese have started to arrive at the hunting flats and quite a few hunters are already working the area.

For those who might be rigging up a heavy salmon line for winter spring fishing a typographical error crept into Sunday's column which could make quite a difference. From the five pound lead ball use 20 feet of 90-pound test leader, not 200 feet as it came out in the story.

Seamless Inlet is giving up the best fishing of the year so far with most boats clicking on winter springs.

Jim Gilbert says "If you know how to fish winter springs you will get them, with an average of two to a boat. Best time is daybreak until 10 a.m. with Bamerton most productive side for six to 14-pounders. Jacksprings are in MacKenzie Bay and try Tod Inlet for the big ones in the late afternoon until dark. Use 100 to 150 feet and planer, plug, minnow or herring strip."

May Hall reports "the biggest run of winter springs and jackspring in years in the inlet, and also lots of legal size blues. The springs are real tackle busters and about every third angler has a sad story of the big one that got away."

Misery Bay, Chesterfield Rock and Goldstream Island are all producing at all fishing depths.

Sooke, Pedder Bay, Victoria waterfront and Oak Bay are all producing good winter spring fishing. Duncan Bay in the Campbell River area is also producing springs.

Cowichan River at the top end is giving up some nice trout fishing (see next Sunday's column) with a single salmon egg, or salmon egg fly, best bet. Most of the fish are rather dark rainbows with a smattering of browns and the odd cutthroat.

Pretty well the full length of the Cowichan River is a good bet now.

In fact all rivers and lakes are worthwhile for trout and it is almost time to watch for the first winter steelhead. Paste is producing big trout at creek mouths in Cowichan Lake, with trolled lures also working fairly well. Great Central Lake is reported good at the foot, not far from The Ark Resort.

Annual meeting of Esquimalt Anglers' Association will be tonight, 8 p.m., in Jubilee Hall on Fraser Street. Annual wind-up dance, banquet and prize presentations of EDA will be Nov. 19 in Jubilee Hall starting at 9 p.m.

Mays

They Liked Willie

BOSTON (AP)—Willie Mays, San Francisco Giants' centre fielder, won the National League's Most Valuable Player Award Wednesday for the second time, outdistancing Los Angeles' Sandy Koufax and Maury Wills.

The 34-year-old Mays, who first won the award in 1954, was the only player named on all 20 ballots cast by two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in each of the 10 National League cities.

He received nine first-place votes, 10 seconds and one third in piling up 224 points in the balloting.

NOT THIS TIME
Ken Boyer of St. Louis Cardinals received 243 points with 14 first-place votes in winning the honor in 1964, but didn't receive a point this year.

Koufax, who captured the Cy Young Memorial Award as baseball's top pitcher after a 26-8 record this year, polled 177 points, while Wills, the Dodgers' speedy shortstop, drew 164.

Mays became only the fifth player since 1931 to win the coveted MVP Award more than once. Stan Musial captured the honor in 1943, '46 and '48; Roy Campanella in '51, '53 and '55; Carl Hubbell in '33 and '36; and Ernie Banks in '58 and '59.

Appearing in 157 games in a vain bid to lead the Giants to the pennant, Mays led the major leagues with 52 homers and 58 total bases. He topped the National League in runs scored with 119. He drove in 112 runs while compiling a .317 batting average.

George Royal Facing Hard-Baked Course

LAUREL, Md. (CP)—George Royal, the British Columbia horse seeking Canada's first victory in five attempts at the $100,000 Washington International here today, is in "real good shape."

Today's running of the Washington International will be heard live on CBU (690) today at 11:48 p.m., according to the station, and a tape of the race will be shown on channel 2 Friday night at 6.

The word came from co-owner Robert Hall of Aldergrove, B.C., who suggested the overnight odds of 6 to 1 on George Royal might shorten by post time.

At that rating, the big hay four-year-old is favored fourth behind the United States' Roman Brother, 6 to 5; the French Diatome, 3 to 1; and Britain's Super Sam, 5 to 1.

The American Hall to All is rated an 8-to-1 shot, Berenjena of Argentina, 10 to 1, and the French Caravan 12 to 1.

DEVELOPED FEVER
Hill Rise, second choice to take the $150,000 International, developed a fever Wednesday and was withdrawn to climax a series of misfortunes that has plagued the 1 1/2-mile grass course race since Laurel's race track officials started putting the field together.

The four-year-old from George A. Pope Jr.'s El Peco ranch of California, last horse to be invited to the race, was found to be running a 103-degree temperature after he had snapped three furlongs in a snappy 36 seconds. Normal temperature for a horse is 100 degrees.

TO BEAR 127 POUNDS
Roman Brother, George Royal and Berenjena all will bear 127 pounds to 120 pounds for the younger entries.

Hall and trainer Don Richardson said they don't attach much weight to George Royal's No. 7 starting position.

For the first time in this event, which lacks the lustre of previous ones, the electric starting gate will be used.

As for strategy, that probably will be left to jockey Willie Shoemaker, selected after Johnny Longden was set down for 10 days on the West Coast. Longden had been riding George Royal.

Girl of Letters

Nor rain nor hail but only study can halt this pretty postmistress on her appointed rounds. When a new post office was commissioned at Long Beach, Caryl Abbott, 19, and her parents were all appointed postal officials. Thus, University of Victoria boasts among its second year education students, an official postmistress.—(Ian McKinn)

Post Office Opened For Long Beach

PORT ALBERNI—Civilization is sneaking up on the rugged loveliness of Long Beach. West coast head postmaster Les Hammer has officially opened a new post office at Abbott's Coffee Shop, two miles off the Ucluelet-Tofino highway, adjacent to Wickaninish Inn.

With the rapid growth of the area, and the ever increasing tourist traffic there, it was felt a post office was a necessity, the postmaster said.

The post offices at Clayoquot and Kakawis, on a nearby portion of the West Coast, have been closed during the past year.

The Clayoquot post office had an interesting history, for it was on the site of the first store and post office on the west coast, with the exception of the early Spanish settlement at Nootka.

Early settlers still tell tales of the tribal wars in the area, when the heads of the defeated were set up on posts in the spot where the store and post office were finally erected.

Indian Boy, 16 Drinks Rum, Chokes, Dies

By PETER TAYLOR

NANAIMO—A 16-year-old boy took 30 minutes to drink a 26-ounce bottle of rum in his home here.

He drank slowly and steadily, finished the bottle, lay down on his bed and died.

"As members of the white race we have failed these people miserably, and now we are reaping the harvest."

That was the comment of coroner Russ Inkster, at the Wednesday night inquest into the death of Indian lad Ronald Drake, 644 Victoria Road.

Three-Way Crash Hurts Three

COURTENAY—Three people were injured in a three-vehicle crash on the Courtenay-Cumberland Road Wednesday night. One of the drivers, Larry Holmes of Cumberland, received a cut to the back of his head. He was treated and released from hospital.

George Dean and Robert Stead, both of Campbell River, and passengers in a truck were injured and are in hospital.

Supreme Court Rules Douglas Treaty Valid

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Island Editor

B.C. game laws do not apply to Indians on Vancouver Island, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled Wednesday.

This is a complete victory for Indians, in a case that has travelled the long road to the highest court in Canada from a Nanaimo magistrate's court trial of two Indians.

And the men who started the whole process, Indian hunters Clifford White and David Bob, were among the last to learn the supreme court's decision.

Mr. Bob, at Nanose, and Mr. White, at Cedar, were not in telephone contact.

In making its decision, the supreme court upheld treaties signed by the Hudson's Bay Company in 1854.

The treaties were signed by

James Douglas, chief factor of the company as well as governor of the Island.

The judgment was greeted with enthusiasm by Island Indian officials.

"This is a great victory for us," said Edward Elliot of Cowichan Indian Band.

Mr. Elliot, who was among those responsible for the progress of the White-Bob case to the supreme court, added "It is a very logical decision."

"If the government makes a treaty, surely it should live up to it. I think there are a lot of white people who will be in favor of this decision."

Crown Plea Rejected

"The provincial government, if they had been sincere in their dealings with us, would not have taken the case to the supreme court."

Seven supreme court justices rejected Crown arguments that James Douglas signed the treaties the wrong way.

For blankets and other "considerations" the Indians signed over their lands "to the white people forever" with the understanding "that we are at liberty to hunt over the unoccupied lands and to carry on our fisheries as formerly."

The supreme court upheld these provisions of the treaties. But one Indian official who had some reservations was Dave

Moon, chief councillor of Cape Mudge Band.

"I don't like the idea of anyone, including Indians, fishing without a permit," said Mr. Moon.

"Some might abuse this privilege. They could take a net into the river and catch large quantities of fish."

"Then, they would be tempted to sell fish."

"I believe fish caught in this manner should be only for consumption of the Indians, and no white man should be allowed on the boat while this fishing is taking place."

With these reservations, Mr. Moon said "the ruling is very good for all Indian people on the Island."

After Season Closed

The case started when Mr. White and Mr. Bob, both members of the Sariqueun tribe, were convicted of being in illegal possession of game after being found with the carcasses of six deer near Nanaimo July 7, 1963. It was two weeks after the close of hunting season.

The conviction and fines of $100 each were wiped out in a new trial on the original magistrate's court decision, and the provincial court of appeal upheld the Indians.

Lawyer for the two hunters was Tom Berger of Vancouver who offered as argument, in BNA act which says the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction to legislate on Indians.

Boosts Indian Morale

Ron Sampson, Indian agent at Duncan, said the supreme court's decision will be a morale-booster for Island Indians.

He said he was certain Indians will not take advantage of the ruling.

"Whites may consider this a case of special privilege, but I prefer to think of it as a basic right."

"We (white people) must not forget these people once held possession of all the territory in the province."

Nanaimo Indian chief Doug White could see no problems arising from the supreme court decision.

He said "I'm very very happy with the verdict."

He was a member of a small committee that spearheaded the appeal against the conviction of Mr. White and Mr. Bob on principle.

Mr. White said there would not be a sudden rush of his people to start killing off the deer. "Indians are the best conservationists," he said.

Duncan cougar hunter Harry Bradshaw, who has hunted in the district for 40 years, said "I don't think the verdict makes much difference, provincial game biologists just want to get rid of the deer anyhow."

He claimed "these biologists

No Expense to Budding Municipality

Gagardi Promises Royston New Roads

ROYSTON—Royston Improvement District, moving toward formation of a district municipality, has received a letter from Highways Minister Gagardi which promises new roads.

The letter states the department of highways will assume responsibility for rebuilding the Cumberland Road within two years.

This will be done at no expense to the municipality if and when it is formed.

It also states Marine Drive in Royston will be hard-surfaced at the department's expense.

Royston took steps earlier this year to become a municipality and at a June meeting voted to go ahead with plans for a plebiscite.

At a meeting to be held Tuesday Dan Campbell, minister of municipal affairs, will address Royston rate-payers and answer questions.

It is expected that the meeting will decide on a date for a plebiscite to be put before the 300 voters.

It is understood if the area changes from a water improvement district to a municipality, water will be paid for out of general taxation which could reduce the water rate by $1 a month and do away with a water tax.

The district buys water from Cumberland and resells it to Royston consumers.

NANAIMO—An RCMP staff sergeant said at the assize court Wednesday there was a "strong possibility" R. Dinham and V. Petersen signatures were written by the same person.

Staff sergeant Don Brown from the Vancouver crime laboratory was testifying at the trial of Rikki Terence Kestle Dinham, 20, of Nanaimo, charged with 11 counts of forgery.

Dinham is alleged to have forged withdrawal slips against a near dormant account in the name of Viggo Petersen.

The trial is taking place before Mr. Justice F. Craig Munro.

Cameron Ready to Work But Not in New Campaign

NANAIMO—Collin Cameron is getting set for another session of parliament, not for another election.

A printed remark attributed to Mr. Cameron, that he expects an "election" after Christmas, was incorrect. What Mr. Cameron expects is the next session of parliament.

He said he doubted the prime minister will call a new session until after Christmas.

The veteran NDP member of parliament for Nanaimo-Cowichan-the-Islands is planning to push for a number of measures needed in his riding.

Quaife Elected To Commission

By JEAN BAIN

COBBLE HILL—Jim Quaife of Cowichan Station, well known in the area as the organizer of Duncan Teen Town, has been elected the first chairman of the newly-organized South Cowichan Recreation Commission.

The commission was organized last month, and the first meeting of the new organization was held at the home of Mrs. L. F. Westerman of Cobble Hill.

The new executive body elected includes: Roger Hilliard of Eagle Heights, vice-chairman; Mrs. R. J. Kietke of Cowichan Station, secretary; and Mrs. L. F. Westerman of Cobble Hill, secretary.

During the meeting, a constitution was formed, read and adopted. A general discussion followed on the aspects of recreation under a regional district.

Members agreed that an immediate program be undertaken to inform the residents of the unorganized area of the purpose of a recreation commission, its function and what facilities are available to the public.

Diking Fatal To Fish

DUNCAN—This city appears willing to undo some of the flood control work it has done at Cowichan River to free dying fish.

Council Wednesday received a letter from the provincial recreation and conservation department, indicating harm is being done to fish by flood control.

STREAMS CLOSED

The letter said dikes and other work done by Duncan, North Cowichan and the Indian Affairs Department has closed off side streams and fish are locked in and dying.

Ald. Jim Saunders admitted this is true in some cases, and said some of the streams cut off could probably be opened again without doing too much damage to the extensive flood control work already undertaken.

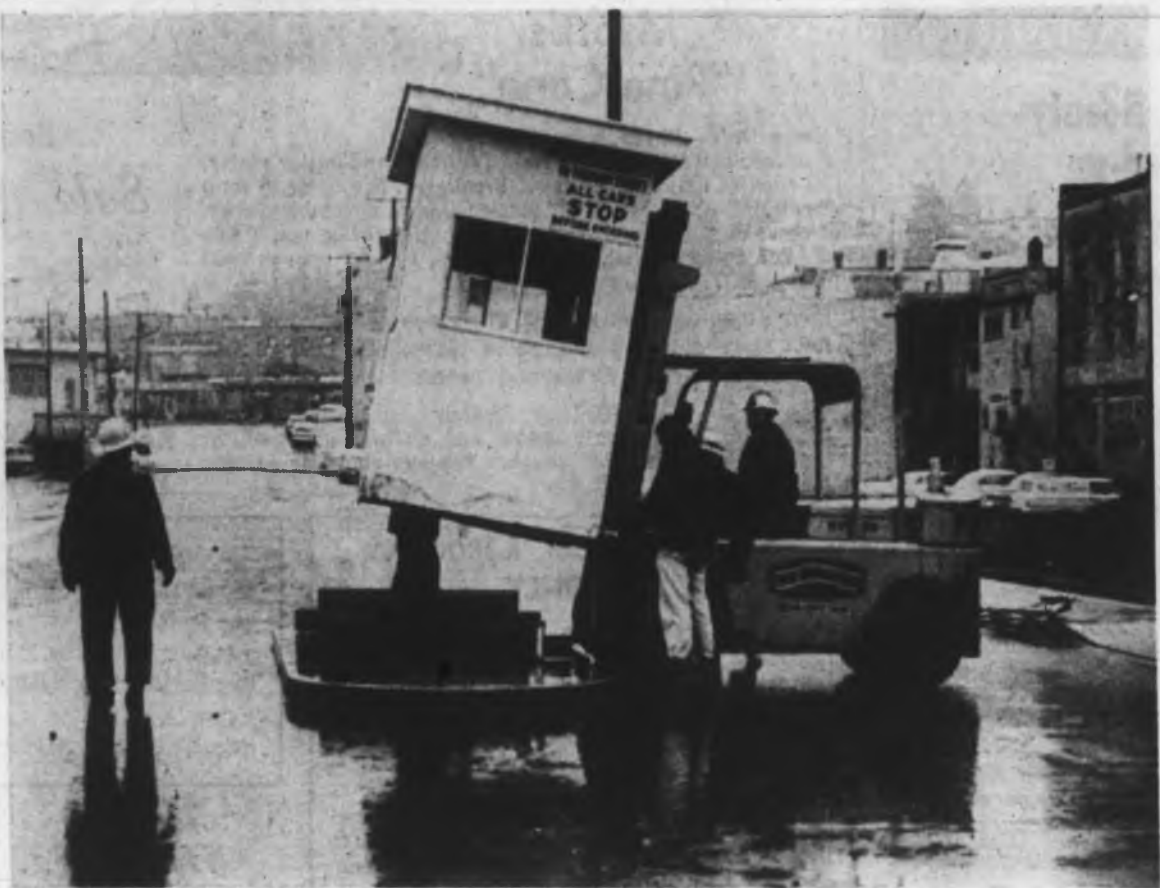

In other council business, Duncan will apply immediately to the Transport Board for a third railway crossing in Duncan, to connect Coronation with Ingram and at a later date to connect with Government St.

DIESEL CAR

"We have a big traffic problem in Duncan, and it increases every day," commented Ald. Hamish Mutter.

He said the council has "a lot of ammunition" to present to the Transport Board, to get the third crossing.

Ald. Mutter pointed out there is only a diesel car and one freight train going through Duncan each day.

Lacklustre Lot Gets Lift

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

November may well be the month of leaden skies and falling leaves but in Victoria it has a much brighter side.

This is the month when debutantes are busy preparing to make their debut before the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Pearkes at the United Services Ball a week Friday at the Empress Hotel.

There are so many things to do before the ball. Debutantes are just a small part of the whole picture even if they are very important.

This coming Monday evening there will be a full rehearsal in the ballroom at the Empress when the debts will go through the paces exactly as they will on the evening of the 19th. Escorts will be there with them promptly at 7:30 p.m. Mrs. R. D. Travis who has been taking debutantes through their pre ball rehearsals for many years will be there to give last minute advice.

Down at the hotel on Tuesday evening the girls had their pictures taken for the week-end paper. I asked if they were getting excited and the answer was unanimous. "No, not excited but nervous, yes."

Pip Holmes, proud father of debutante daughter, Diana,

was providing competition to Colonelist photographer, Bud Kinsman. Successfully, we hope.

After the rehearsal on Monday evening, Major and Mrs. Keith MacDougall will give a buffet supper party for the debts and their escorts. Their daughter, Miss Josephine MacDougall and her escort, Bob Henderson, will be helping them at the party.

Another party will be held on Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis E. Harris, parents of debutante Pamela Harris. There will be dancing and later supper at this pre ball party.

Mr. Robert Bonner and Mrs. Sam Lane, mothers of debutantes, Barbara Bonner and Dorothy Lane, are having a tea for the girls on Sunday afternoon at the Olde England Inn.

16th Birthday Party

Not quite in the debutante picture but getting awfully close was the party that Mr. and Mrs. Eric Leary gave for daughter, Erica on her 16th birthday.

The party, a real bang up affair complete with an orchestra, was held at the home of Erica's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Paddy Walton.

Erica tells me her party was a real riot (her words) and that everyone is still talking about what a good time they had. Erica had a lovely new melon colored dress for her party.

Junior League Patrons

University of Victoria president, Dr. Malcolm G. Taylor, and Mrs. Taylor are patrons of the annual Junior League of Vancouver cabaret two-

night show this year. The Taylors will be going over for the first night on the 19th. The theme is "0065" and will be held in the Commodore.

Pre-Wedding Parties

Gail Buckle, a member of two pioneer families of Victoria, (her grandfather was the late Stephen Jones) is being entertained at a number of parties before her wedding to Mr. Gary Johnston.

The 16th Scottish Band (the groom is a band member) will be in attendance at the wedding which will take place at St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church on the 20th of this month.

Mothers of the principals, Mrs. Harry Buckle Jr. and Mrs. Robert Johnston did the honors at the tea table when Mrs. Maurice Chernoff gave a miscellaneous shower for the bride-to-be.

Mrs. David Schulz also gave a miscellaneous shower for Miss Buckle and last Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Dudge were hosts for both groom elect and his fiancée. There were about 20 couples who brought grocery gifts, recipes, ingredients and pots and pans to cook them in. Later there was a buffet supper.

Champagne Luncheon

Linda Gibson, another bride-to-be of the 20th has also been feted at several parties. Mrs. Adrian Greenbank gave a champagne luncheon for her at the Oak Bay Marina when guests were Mrs. David Deno, Mrs. Frank Gibson, Mrs. Ted Greenbank and Mrs. P. Huns.

WHEN MY READERS TAKE THE TROUBLE to write letters about a product I recommend, I know they are sincerely impressed by it. I have a 'wealth' of wonderful letters about TEMPLETON'S T.R.C.s... all from men and women who have suffered from neuritic, arthritic or rheumatic pain... and have found welcome, fast relief through taking T.R.C.s. Do try T.R.C.s if you are a sufferer... and get fast DOUBLE ACTION relief through taking T.R.C.s internally and applying Templeton's FLAME-cream Liniment externally. Ask for FLAME-cream Liniment, in the handy roll-on applicator bottle, at your favourite drug counter.
